British Laborites Seek To Avoid Economy Crisis in 1952—Bevin

New Exchange Schemes Eyed To Supplant Dealings Now Based on Marshall Plan

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said last night the Labor Government is discussing with the United States ways of avoiding any economic crisis in Britain when Marshall Plan aid ends in 1952.

Bevin was making a campaign speech near London in behalf of Labor's bid for reelection in Thursday's national balloting. Apparently referring to the prevention of any serious interruption of British-American economic dealings two years hence, he said:

"We are working hard to see whether we can bring about a new payment scheme in exchange which will not involve us in this gold and dollar business and which will not put across our own Commonwealth territories."

He did not elaborate. Only last Friday Bevin had said that Britons "don't want to ask America for more gifts in 1952—we don't want to talk about more loans. We believe we can get on our feet."

Conservative leader Winston Churchill's plea for new "highest level" talks to bridge the gap between East and West continued to draw considerable attention in the election campaign. Commonwealth Minister Philip Noel-Baker, speaking at Coventry, said the Conservatives would have less chance of winning an agreement with Moscow than would Labor because of what he called the Conservatives' prewar record of snubbing Moscow at Munich and in other negotiations.

Russia again was hampering high-way communications between East and West Germany. The Soviets seized 22 trucks at their high-way checkpoint outside Berlin last night in an effort to block all metal shipments by truck to Western Germany. East Germany is short of metals.

The Russian action came a day after the Western commanders in Berlin had sent their fourth protest since Jan. 21 against Russia's "little blockade" tactics. The protest accused Soviet Maj. Gen. Alexander Kotikov of a "calculated attempt to restrict normal movement of persons and goods."

The stopping of metal shipments came as American officials in Berlin gloomily conceded that West Berlin is in a bad way economically. West Berlin's unemployment has reached a new high for

Damage Plea Next Step In Vogeler Spy Trial

BUDAPEST, Hungary—(AP)—Prosecutor Gyula Alapi marshalled technical witnesses yesterday to testify on the damage done to Hungary by the alleged spying and sabotage of American Businessman Robert Vogeler and six codefendants.

Interest will center on this phase of the spy trial when it resumes today, together with the large list of American and British Legation personnel, Army and Intelligence officers, and other prominent persons whose names have been brought into the case.

Vogeler, 38-year-old Vice President of International Telephone and Telegraph Company, asked for a mild sentence Saturday after pleading guilty. He declared he used his business connections as a cover for professional intelligence activities, and that nearly all American businessmen in Eastern Europe were required to turn in intelligence reports to the U. S.

His six codefendants confessed to similar charges. They were Edgar Sanders, a British official in the Standard Electric Company, Hungary; Imre Geiger, Hungarian manager of the company; Zoltan Rado, a section chief in the Hungarian ministry of heavy trade; Edina Doery, hotel barmaid and telephone operator, the Rev. Istvan Klemen, a Catholic priest, and Klement Domokos, chief accountant for the Standard company.

Alapi, who prosecuted Josef

Cardinal Mindszenty and Laszlo Rajk, former No. 2 Hungarian Communist, was expected to make the most of the defendants' admissions that company production was limited deliberately and deliveries to the Soviet Union were sabotaged.

The technical witnesses are expected to testify to the exact amount of this damage.

Former business associates of Vogeler have speculated that the underlying purpose of the trial was to furnish an excuse for the Communist-dominated government to seize IT&T properties in Hungary.

Among the witnesses expected to be called today are Karoly Vas, a former county official, and Marietta Scitovszky, daughter of a pre-war minister of the interior. They were arrested at the same time as Vogeler and the other defendants, but were not placed on trial.

MEDICINE MAN SEES WORLD GO 'POP,' INDIANS CALM; WHITE MEN WORRIED

AZTEC, N. M.—(UP)—An Indian medicine man predicted yesterday in the weekly Aztec Review that the world will explode before next Winter. Sixty thousand Navajos took the news calmly, but 300 of their white neighbors rushed out to buy extra copies of the paper.

The prediction came from an elderly medicine man who noted that the ants and squirrels had not bothered to store food for this so far mild Winter. As a result, he concluded that next Winter would never arrive.

His exact prediction was that Shiprock, a huge volcanic slab which can be seen for miles across the desert, would "blow big ship blow, go high in air, fall down on white man and John Collier." Collier was Commissioner of Indian Affairs under the late President Roosevelt.

The medicine man said the white man was to be punished because of his treatment of the Navajos (which once drew a congressional investigation) and because "the white man lives crazy-like."

The tribal leader indicated a few Navajos would survive the desert holocaust he predicted, and that he would be among them. But he held out no hope for any of his white brethren.

Townfolk who plant crops half by Indian lore and half by seed catalogs indicated they were impressed.

Editor George Bowra said he had known the medicine man for 40 years and that he held a high place in tribal councils. The elderly Indian knew nothing of Russia, atomic energy, A-bombs or H-bombs.

500-Bed Vet Hospital Approved for Atlanta

Plant on Candler Estate To Be Ready in 2 Years

The way is cleared today for a new and completely modern 500-bed veterans' hospital in Atlanta.

The official approval for the new unit came in Washington yesterday when CA officials revealed 26 new veterans hospitals and six major additions to existing hospitals will be completed this year.

The Atlanta institution will be located on the Asa G. Candler, Jr., estate, local VA officials said. On Briarcliff Road, N. E., the land and mansion were purchased from Candler last year for about $250,000.

Modern skyscraper type in design, the new hospital will be used for general medical and surgical purposes. It will be operated in conjunction with the Emory University School of Medicine.

Hospital authorities estimated it will take at least two years to have the building ready for occupancy. According to present plans, the mansion will be used either for a nurses' home or doctors' quarters.

The Washington announcement said that some temporary institutions would be closed as new structures become available, leaving local authorities to believe Lawson General Hospital at Chamblee will be closed as soon as the new hospital is occupied.

Over the nation, the VA will add 11,710 beds to the hospital system. Currently VA has about 109,000 beds in 131 hospitals. The Budget Bureau has authorized a total VA capacity of 131,000 beds.

Fair, Brisk Weather to Stay

Top coats will be welcome company for working Atlantans this morning, the weatherman indicates.

The skies are due to stay fair, but the temperatures are due to stay low, he says. Tonight will continue cool, according to the official forecast, but tomorrow is due to bring fair and warmer weather.

High reading today is predicted to reach 52 after a low reading of 32 was recorded early this morning. Tomorrow's readings are due to range between 34 and 60. Yesterday the mercury went to a sunny 54 after hitting a base reading of 43 early in the day.

Eight-month-old Jean Shirley is a critical condition at Grady Hospital with a skull fracture, and Virginia Shirley, 13, suffered possible concussion of the brain. She is also at Grady.

Fulton County P. M. Carl Thompson said the 1937 sedan, driven by Walter Shirley, of Route 1, Sugar Valley, was traveling about 30 miles an hour when it piled into the back of the trailer owned by the Atlanta Paper Company, driven by H. F. Nunn, who was uninjured.

Others treated at Grady for less serious injuries were Mrs. Shirley, in whose lap the injured infant was sitting; Dorothy Shirley, 6; Betty Shirley, 3; Raymond Shirley, 10; Lloyd Shirley and Roy Serritt, all of Sugar Hill.

Idle Miners Force Court Showdown

Full-Scale Strike Indicated

Still On; Lewis Order Defied

WASHINGTON—(AP)—With every sign pointing to a continuing full-scale coal strike, the Administration has laid plans for court contempt action against the miners' union. A second call from John L. Lewis, boss of the United Mine Workers Union, for a back-to-work movement of his 372,000 striking soft coal diggers seemingly was going widely unheeded because he had no contract for them. Dead-of-Winter coal stocks averaged less than 10 days' supply.

Officials waited to see what happened in the fields today. But they conceded hopes are dim that enough of the strikers who quit last Monday would get back on the job to avoid court enforcement of a Federal court's week-old order against the strike.

The main question seemed to be when the Justice Department will act. If the miners stay out today, Government attorneys may seek contempt action right away—or they could wait until tomorrow, just to make sure the strike is still on.

Attorneys handling the situation declined to talk. It was indicated they will have a huddle this morning on their next move.

Lawyers for the Government and Lewis will be in court today anyway. They will argue before Federal Judge Richmond B. Keach on whether to convert Keach's present 10-day restraining order against the strike into an 80-day injunction. The restraining order expires tomorrow.

Keach himself could raise the question of compliance with his existing order. That would bring up the whole question of contempt today.

The present court order was issued on Saturday, Feb. 11. Lewis on the same day messaged the miners that he had no choice but to tell them to return. The miners ignored both the court's and Lewis' orders. Lewis sent out new back-to-work instructions last Friday.

At least 11 balking UMW locals representing some 8,000 diggers in Southwestern Pennsylvania officially have rejected Lewis' second order.

In West Virginia, with some 120,000 miners, observers said the men are ignoring pleas to return to work.

A total of seven more locals in Ohio, Illinois, New Mexico and Colorado also rejected the back-to-work move at special meetings.

The 18 voting locals have a total membership of 12,400 diggers. Here in Washington, John D. Battle, Executive Vice President of the National Coal Association, said all reports indicated a continued stoppage.

Meanwhile, the coal strike dimmed Broadway as the Albany-decreed brown-out of bright lights struck New York City.

The order was effective at noon yesterday but it was not until night that darkened Times Square told the somber conservation story. There were few violators—mostly bars, side-street restaurants and shops that have automatic devices to turn on show window lights at night.

REMEMBER WALNUT 6565

MANCHESTER, N. H.—(AP)—Dr. Herman N. Sander, charged with murder in a mercy killing, will go on trial today encouraged by the prayers of his pastor for a speedy acquittal.

Divine intervention was asked yesterday by the Rev. C. Leslie Curtice in the Congregational Church directly across the street from Dr. Sander's home in nearby Candia.

"We would pray to Thee," the minister prayed, "for the speedy acquittal of Dr. Sander, that the basis of information in the case may be moral wrong. Ultimately my position will be vindicated."

Under New Hampshire law, first-degree murder is punishable by hanging, or, upon a jury's recommendation, by life imprisonment.

The statutes define various other classes of homicide, down to second degree manslaughter, for which a maximum penalty is set, but the minimum is left to the discretion of the presiding judge.

Dr. Sander will be the first defendant in a capital case in this State to go on trial while still at liberty. He is free under $25,000 bail.

Dr. Sander, 41-year-old physician has been charged with the murder of a woman patient.

The indictment under which Dr. Sander will be tried charges first degree murder. It accuses him of injecting 40 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, a hopeless cancer patient, "well knowing the said air injection to be sufficient to cause death."

Dr. Sander's wife and three young daughters were absent from the services although they usually attend.

Gun Blast Ends Life Of Ex-Army Captain

'No Murderer,' Wife Says
—'I'm Not the Type'

LURAY, Va.—(AP)—Mrs. Barbara Parks, 26, a slender, attractive redhead, early yesterday reported the fatal shooting of her retired Army captain husband and said there had been an accident.

Officers found the body of the woman's husband, Robert Franklin Parks, 38, crumpled on the bedroom floor of the Parks' mountain home.

The body was nude except for a pair of socks.

Commonwealth's Atty. I. R. Dovel said Mrs. Parks, her face badly scratched, was being held in the Page County Jail "pending investigation of the shooting." He said an inquest will be held today and that he planned to file no charge before then.

Dovel said Mrs. Parks told him: "I'm no murderer. I'm not the type."

Mrs. Parks said during brief questioning, according to Dovel, that her husband, for four years a Japanese war prisoner, often left her alone with a gun in the house for her protection.

Dovel quoted Mrs. Parks as saying that Parks was "trying to show me how to operate the gun when it went off."

Parks, in the Army 21 years, was overseas when the war started. He was assigned to the Fifth Air Base group. Parks was captured at Batavia after being wounded by shrapnel. Given little medical attention during his imprisonment, his wound eventually led to deterioration of one lung.

CUB SCOUTS SEE COLLECTION OF ARTICLES IN DEAD LETTER ROOM

GOINGS AND COMINGS OF MAIL EXPLAINED!

Scouts Trail Letters in Post Office

What happens to your letter after you drop it in the Post Office slot?

Its journey through the Post Office Building alone is an exciting adventure, a group of Cub Scouts learned on a visit to the new Post Office here.

The eager eight and nine-year-olds, members of Pack No. 2 sponsored by the Capitol View School PTA, "picked up the trail" behind the slot.

They followed the letters to the first separation tables, where the long envelopes and short envelopes are divided, placed on separate conveyor belts and sent through the cancellation machines.

All bulky or odd-sized letters that won't go through the machines are "pulled" at these tables for separate handling.

The next stop was the primary distribution gate, where the letters are placed in boxes according to states, large cities or Atlanta mail. All Georgia mail is separated by towns at the next distribution gate. (Atlanta letters are taken to the incoming-mail division where they are separated by streets, stations and business district).

Next the outgoing letters were tied into bundles, locked into pouches, and dropped through the floor onto a conveyor belt which carries them under Spring Street to the Terminal Station.

"Gee, I'd like to ride that," more than one of the wide-eyed youngsters remarked as they watched the belt move. They were satisfied to walk, however, through the tunnel to the station.

On their way to the tunnel, the boys visited what turned out to be the high point of the trip—the dead letter department. They watched in fascination as H. R.

By SHIRLEY ZIEGLER

Portwood, Foreman, opened letters and packages which had been mailed without addresses or had lost the address labels.

If a return address is given, the mail is sent back, but Foreman had to tear up a beautiful Valentine before the heartbroken boys because it had no return address inside.

This strange department almost resembles a second-hand shop. Tables were piled high with hardware, glassware, books and other items which will be sold at public auction by the Post Office.

"Do you have anything to give away?" Leonard McElroy asked hopefully. Portwood had to say "no," but the 10 Cub Scouts did get a souvenir. When they stopped by the registered mail division, the clerk put a bright red ink stamp on each boy's hand.

GROUND-BREAKING CEREMONIES FOR BUFORD DAM SET MARCH 1

All North Georgians are invited to attend ground-breaking ceremonies marking start of construction March 1 on the $42,000,000 Buford dam.

Buford has declared March 1 a holiday and will throw out the welcome mat with a gaily decorated city. Decorators will move into Buford tomorrow to begin stringing bunting and other decorations for the event, which will be held on Mayor Hartfield's birthday.

A committee from the Buford Kiwanis Club, of which H. W. Gardner is President, and Buford merchants have joined to make the celebration one of the most memorable in history.

Markers will be placed to guide motorists from Atlanta, Gainesville, Lawrenceville, Cumming and other cities. They will rendezvous in an area near Carroll's Service Station, two miles south of Buford, on the Atlanta highway, at 10:15 a. m. From there the motorcade will proceed up Highway 23 to Buford, up Hill Street to Main Street, through the Sugar Hill community and thence to the dam site.

$1,500,000,000 Foreign Aid Cut Aimed by Senate Funds Group

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A drive to cut Marshall Plan spending by at least $1,500,000,000 got under way yesterday among members of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Secretary of State Acheson and Paul G. Hoffman, the Economic Co-Operation Administrator, go to Capitol Hill tomorrow to start the ball rolling on a third year's program of giving economic aid to Western European nations walling off Communism.

But in advance of appearance before Senate and House Foreign Relations Committee, appropriations lawmakers who handle money bills—rather than merely the authorization measures before the foreign relations groups—were organizing for deep cuts in the program.

Sen. Robertson, Democrat, Virginia, told a reporter he was going to vote for a reduction of at least $1,600,000,000 under the $3,778,000,000 in Marshall Plan funds Congress provided for the year ending next June 30.

Sen. George, Democrat, Georgia, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted Hoffman himself would undercut the budget figure in his proposals to the two committees this week.

Observing that he believes the budget allowance too high, George called for a summary by Acheson of all foreign spending proposed for the year starting July 1.

Atlantan Spots Stolen Car; Regains It, Jails 2 Suspects

By GORDON SAWYER

An alert Atlantan has regained his car and landed two men in jail here, Fulton Police reported last night.

W. H. Winn, Jr., of Powell's Ferry Road, on the way home from work Saturday, spotted a 1949 red automobile he believed to be one stolen from him. He followed the car from Northside Drive, N. W., where he first saw it, to Blackland Road. There the two occupants abandoned the automobile and fled on foot.

Winn called the police. Dogged Fulton police on the trail of the pair nearly a mile to Jett Road, near North Fulton Park, where Ptl. B. L. Thrasher, L. W. Cook and J. L. Hopkins nabbed the suspects.

Lodged in Fulton tower, they were listed as C. F. Rush, alias M. J. Rudd, 25, of Bremen, an escapee from Reidsville State Prison, and Jake Leach, 36, of 4401 Northside Drive. They were charged with larceny of an automobile.

SEEK FAT MAN; DON'T KNOW WHY

VIENNA—(AP)—Fat men were making themselves scarce in Vienna yesterday. Russian soldiers, aided by Austrian police, were out in force checking all highway approaches to the city.

One Austrian, assigned to inspect the passengers of each automobile that goes by, said: "All I know is that we are looking for a big fat man—and I don't know why."

New Uranium Plants Started In Tennessee

Will Speed Making Of Bomb Material

OAK RIDGE, Tenn.—(INS)—Vast expansion of facilities to produce hydrogen bomb material is now under way on the Atomic Energy Commission's closely guarded 90-square-mile reservation hidden away in the East Tennessee hills.

Construction has started on two new plants to make uranium 235, which will trigger the super-lethal H-bomb.

Tritium, a form of hydrogen which can be used as the major explosive of the hydrogen bomb, is also being produced here.

Two new uranium plants, which will employ the gaseous diffusion method of refining U-238 into U-235, will cost 250 million dollars.

Named K-29 and K-31, following the wartime Manhattan project code, they will be rushed to completion under emergency contracting procedure which has eliminated competitive bidding.

The expansion program was initiated in Washington several months ago and did not at that time contemplate the verdict to build the H-bomb.

Since the fateful decision was made it has become vitally important that the new plants get into production at the earliest possible date.

The expansion is being financed by funds already available to the AEC, which has made quick action possible without complications of a Congressional appropriation wrangle.

Aiken Raps Brannan, Truman on Crop View

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Sen. Aiken, Republican, Vermont, said yesterday Secretary of Agriculture Brannan "is playing potato politics," and President Truman is "guilty of political hypocrisy" in his stand on farm-price props.

Aiken spoke out as the Senate approached a potentially sharp debate over Government price supports and controls for potatoes, cotton and peanuts.

Majority Leader Lucas, Democrat, Illinois, has warned Senators they may be held in night session Monday in an attempt to settle the dispute.

Aiken and other Senators from important Northern potato producing States oppose Lucas' proposal to withdraw all price supports on potatoes until Congress requires rigid Government controls over their planting and marketing.

"I don't think that can pass the Senate or the Congress," Aiken told a reporter. "Secretary Brannan now has ample authority under existing laws to handle the surplus potato situation. He has been dramatizing potato supports and trying to make Congress look bad."

Brannan set off Congressional protests recently by announcing plans to dispose of about half of the 50,000,000 bushels of surplus potatoes acquired by the Government under the price support programs for livestock feed and fertilizer. He first took the surplus problem before the Senate Agriculture Committee but was told the decision was his.

Aiken also took exception to claims by President Truman and the Democratic National Committee that Brannan's proposal for "production payments" to farmers minus price supports would be a better program for perishable farm products.

AWARDS FOR HELP TO HANDICAPPED—Abe Goldstein, Mrs. Helen Mankin and Col. R. H. Rarey, standing; Miss Otella Langley, sitting, a charter member of the Physically Handicapped Lodge.

AWARDS FOR AIDING CRIPPLED

Local Handicapped Group Honors Two Atlantans

An Atlanta businessman who stuck by a crippled employee and another Atlantan who has actively sought legislation to help the handicapped today hold awards from the two-year-old Atlanta Lodge 105, American Federation of the Physically Handicapped.

The Lodge's first award went to Abe Goldstein, operator of Prior Tire Company. About 10 years ago, one of his employees was seriously injured in an automobile accident on the way to work. Both of her legs were broken in several places and after months of treatment, broke again when she tried to walk, necessitating other expensive treatment in several hospitals.

During all the years she was unable to work, Goldstein provided both living expenses for herself and her mother, and for all the medical expenses. His award was in recognition of his "outstanding example of practical assistance rendered a physically handicapped person."

Col. R. H. Rarey was the recipient of the second award, as founder of the Atlanta lodge and his work seeking legislation for funds for rehabilitation of the physically handicapped, both in Atlanta and in Washington. Col. Rarey is also the author of a bill now before Congress seeking relief for sufferers of Hansen's Disease.

Both awards were presented by the Lodge's President, Mrs. Helen

Officers Sought For Reserve Outfit

Col. Franklin C. Chalmers, who recently assumed command of the 325th Logistical Division in Atlanta, is seeking officers to fill vacancies in the reserve Army organization.

"The officer who can make sound plans will be welcome, preferably those with combat experience," says Col. Chalmers. "We can also use the alert and aggressive type, but the officer who can make and follow a sound plan is a vital necessity for this type of organization," he adds.

Additional information on the unit which is designed to provide a link of communications between task forces and zones of interiors may be obtained at the Army Public Information Office, 699 Ponce de Leon Ave., N. E.

Bulgarian, U. S. Split Imminent

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—(UP) Forty-three Americans in Sofia have been alerted for a possible break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Bulgaria this week, reliable informants said last night.

The United States is expected to hand a note to the Bulgarian Minister in Washington—probably within 48 hours—setting a time limit for cancellation of the Bulgarian order for expulsion of the United States Minister Donald R. Heath, informants said.

The alternative to Bulgarian compliance with the demand, the informants said, is expected to be a formal break in relations.

The United States has been waiting one month for Bulgaria to answer its original note de-

FALLS ASLEEP, RAMS POLICE CAR

CONSTITUTION STATE NEWS SERVICE
MARIETTA—J. C. Biddy fell asleep at the wheel of a speeding B&G taxicab early yesterday morning and never woke up until it rammed a police cruiser and crashed the front of Hardeman Brothers Stationery Store on Roswell Street here.

The police car had halted some 50 feet from the store to make way for the cab, according to Ptl. Forrest Brooks. He said the cab caused $600 damage to the cruiser and sliced into the store after knocking out an entire section of stucco wall.

Biddy, who was charged with speeding and reckless driving, suffered only minor injuries.

The alternative to Bulgarian compliance with the demand, the informants said, is expected to be a formal break in relations.

Brief Power Failure Hits Atlanta Homes

Cause of Overload Probed By Georgia Power Company

Georgia Power Company officials are baffled today by a power failure which caused "lights out" in many sections of Atlanta and in other parts of the State as far away as Macon and Augusta yesterday.

The failure originally occurred about 9 a. m. Dudley Brewer, of the Power Company staff, told The Constitution the 110,000-volt underground cable between the Boulevard and Grady substations was cut off at that time by an overload on the line.

An automatic protective switch killed the power and prevents equipment from burning out in case of an overload, he said.

The Boulevard-Grady cutoff shifted heavy power loads to other lines throughout Atlanta causing numerous power failures. Most heavily affected was the Piedmont substation which supplies power to the northeast section. It was off for nearly an hour. The Grady line, however, was back in operation in half a minute.

Meanwhile, substations throughout the State reported power failures as a result of the overload. Augusta reported "lights out" for only a few minutes while the Dublin-Vidalia area was blacked-out for 37 minutes.

Plant Arkwright near Macon was also cut out, but the City of Macon, on another line, burned brightly throughout the minor crisis.

Was Fuchs Betrayed By Russian Agents?

Atom Informant No Longer Thought Helpful to Soviets

LONDON—(UP)—Russian agents might have planted the evidence that trapped Dr. Klaus Fuchs, ace scientist now awaiting trial on the charge of betraying American and British atomic energy secrets, it was suggested yesterday.

The Russians may have decided to betray Fuchs, as he is accused of betraying the United States and Great Britain, because he stopped giving them information.

In the excitement of Fuchs' arrest and the dramatic reading of his confession in Bow Street police court, the fact that he said he had closed down on the Russians was almost unnoticed.

William J. Scardon, security officer at the great Harwell Atomic Research Station who recounted Fuchs' confession, said:

1. "Fuchs said he was engaged in espionage from the middle of 1942 until about a year ago."

2. Fuchs said that "for the last two years of his association with the Russians there was a gradual reduction in the flow of information which he imparted, since he was beginning to have doubts as to the propriety of his actions."

Spies have often been betrayed by their own employers when they ceased to be of use. The custom is to plant information which leads to the spy's arrest.

The theory that Russian agents turned in Fuchs when he stopped giving information has been cropping up more and more insistently.

Those who sponsor the theory say if the Russians did betray Fuchs, they achieved a shrewd double stroke—first they disposed of an agent who, no longer valuable, might have become a danger; they succeeded in shaking an Anglo-American co-operation in sharing atomic energy secrets.

American protests against further sharing secrets with Britain are advanced in support of point two.

H-Bomb Range Said 3,000 Miles

CHICAGO—(AP)—A scientist said yesterday he believes it would be possible to destroy all life in an area measuring 1,500 by 3,000 miles by hydrogen bomb blast's radioactivity.

The calculation was made by Harrison S. Brown, University of BALTIMORE—(AP)—Sumner T. Pike, acting chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, yesterday compared the daunting atomic era with conditions immediately after James Watt invented the steam engine.

"We can't say what will happen," he explained. "We can say only that something will happen."

Chicago physicist, on the University's round table broadcast (NBC).

Kenneth Burke, professor of English at Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., another speaker on the program, said he believes many persons have reacted to the hydrogen bomb with "morbid fascination."

He said that the element of detachment possible in ordering mass killings with the bomb was a factor which might put it to grisly use.

Brown said that "if the bomb works at all, there may well be an upper limit to the size of the explosion that may be created."

Fished Off Ice

They built themselves an igloo of ice and snow. And rescue came yesterday to five ice fishermen, marooned on a large floe in Saginaw Bay, near Sebawaing, Mich. Franklin Hoffmeister, 27, a wartime pilot, did the trick. He flew a ski-equipped plane onto the mile-long ice cake five times to pick up the men. A physician said the rescued showed no ill effects. They had flown out to the floe Saturday and a snowstorm barred their return. They are Andrew Draschil, 22; John Draschil, 25; Paul Schweitzer, 25; Robert Eisengruber, 28, and Karl Kindinger, 28. All they had to eat was a candy bar; they split it into five pieces. The fish they caught? They couldn't cook with gas or anything else. No fuel.

Denmark likes Mrs. Eugene Anderson, first U. S. woman ambassador. Her husband, John Anderson, flew into New York yesterday from Copenhagen and said she has been "very favorably received."

She has been there since last October. The late (?) Hitler twice ordered the Vatican wiped out, a German com at Frankfurt was told. Stars and Stripes, Army newspaper, quoted Rudolph Rahn, last Nazi ambassador to Rome as testifying Der Fuehrer (1) ordered the Vatican burned to the ground when Italy surrendered in 1943 and (2) leveled by air bombardment in the Winter of 1944.

RELIGION IN GEORGIA Bigger Membership Or More Devotion?

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

Here's a situation. The official board of a church with 3,000 members, one half of whom never attend church, and where there has been no revival for 15 years, became so anxious for a revival it included in the annual budget a special sum of $500 to underwrite the expenses of a genuine revival, and placed that money at the disposal of the pastor.

Upon inquiry of the Pastor six weeks later as to what had been done with the $500, the Pastor reported that it had been used to employ a visitation man for five days to direct a visitation campaign, "so we can get some more members."

Strike Ballots Sent To Telephone Workers

'Threat Doesn't Make Sense,' Bell Spokesman Protests

Members of the Communications Workers of America-CIO employed by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company in nine Southern States have been asked whether they will authorize strike action.

William A. Smallwood, President of Division 42 of the telephone workers union, said yesterday that ballots had been sent out to the 32,000 telephone employees in the Division.

"Bargaining sessions to date have convinced us that Southern Bell is following the AT&T line of refusal to grant any wage increase whatever," Smallwood said.

"The Union's threat of a strike just doesn't make sense," a spokesman for Southern Bell said here, "and is particularly inappropriate now when the Company is studying demands of the Union made to us only last Friday."

Furthermore, the spokesman said, "under terms of our present contract with the Union, under no circumstances can the contract be terminated earlier than June 5, and then only after 60 days' notice."

On Friday the Union proposed a 15-cent-an-hour package wage increase, which, according to Smallwood, included all the demands made since the opening of bargaining Feb. 6.

Over the country about 100,000 CWA-CIO telephone workers including the nation-wide Western Electric workers divisions, are set to strike on Friday. About 150,000 others would be eligible to strike after March 1.

A vital section of the divisions opens a five-day convention today in Memphis under the leadership of National President Joseph A. Beirne. The meeting concludes Feb. 24, the last day of the Government-requested strike truce.

2 Fliers Lost in Darkness Rescued by Townspeople

Scottsboro Shines Car Lights On Airfield; Recalls Tragedy

SCOTTSBORO, Ala.—(AP)—Two young fliers were dramatically rescued from rain and darkness over Scottsboro yesterday by townspeople who recalled the tragic death of an Army pilot here.

More than 50 automobiles paraded through early morning blackness to the little unlighted airport six miles from town when news spread that a plane was circling overhead, lost.

Many of Scottsboro's 6,000 citizens had been alerted by Frank Crenshaw, Jr., an ambulance driver, and the sheriff's office and police.

Crenshaw shined the spotlight of his ambulance up on the clouds and the pilot of the lost craft blinked his signal lights in response.

The ambulance driver led the long file of cars to positions along the runway. The vehicles fixed their lights on the landing strip. Crenshaw trained his spotlight on the windsock so the pilot could determine wind direction.

The small plane settled down to a perfect landing. Two Birmingham youths, Robert Kieran, 21, pilot, and Charles Owens, 18, stepped out and were greeted by a delegation of Scottsboro citizens headed by Mayor W. W. Gross.

The two youths were given a place to sleep, and later returned safely to Birmingham.

Wreck Laid To Lack of Safety Device

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N. Y.—(UP)—Mayor W. Harry Lister charged last night that Friday's tragic train collision resulted from lack of automatic train-stopping equipment on the Long Island railroad and demanded immediate installation of such safety devices.

Lister telegraphed the demand to the railroad's trustees and sent a copy to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, asking State help in getting speedy action to prevent other accidents. The wreck killed 29 persons and injured 113.

Residents of Rockville Centre were "shocked" to learn after the collision of two trains on a single track that the LIRR had failed to equip the trains with devices which would stop them automatically—by cutting off their electric power—if they ran through a stop signal, he said.

District Attorney Frank A. Guinetti repeated yesterday, after questioning Motorman Jacob Kiefer of the eastbound train, that the accident occurred because Kiefer ran his train through a red light. The slightly-injured motorman is charged with manslaughter.

Lister demanded action while 38 of the injured remained in hospitals. "Lack of automatic safety equipment in this case on Feb. 17 resulted in the loss of 29 lives and injuries to scores," the mayor said in his message to the railroad trustees.

"The people... had a right to assume those in charge... had taken every precaution to give maximum protection to our citizens riding the railroad."

"It is our understanding that mechanisms in use on other transit lines would have automatically stopped a second train and prevented it from entering upon a track on which another train already was proceeding," Lister said.

Protestant Churchmen Consider Bomb Problem

Declare World Situation Demands Intensive Study

DETROIT—(AP)—Protestant churchmen from across the nation yesterday asked for "the widest possible co-ordination of religious forces in the country" to consider implications of the hydrogen and atomic bombs.

Some 450 delegates from 30 States overwhelmingly endorsed a resolution in the last hour of a four-day session here on the church and economic life.

The resolution goes to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, sponsor of the conference. It asked the council "to take such steps as may be necessary to carry forward the most intensive program of study, meetings and conferences" to discuss "the implications of the present world situation with special reference to the atomic and hydrogen bombs."

Former Congressman Jerry Voorhis, of Chicago, a delegate from the Protestant Episcopal church, and Joseph W. Fichter, of Columbus, Ohio, a Methodist delegate, introduced the resolution. It also asked strengthening of the United Nations as "an agency capable of actually preventing war."

Earlier the churchmen voted that "extensive use of taxation to reduce inequalities that now exist"

is desirable from a Christian and economic viewpoint."

But, they added, a tax policy should be evaluated from its effects upon incentives, production, the welfare of low income groups and the standard of living.

The conference will send the conclusions of the delegates to the participating organizations for dissemination to millions of Protestants. The conference findings are not binding on any of the organizations.

The churchmen also approved:

1. "Federal aid to public education with a maximum of local and State controls."

2. "Positive action now to assure all our people without discrimination full access to adequate, modern medical, surgical and other health services."

3. A proposal for "industry councils" in which representatives of labor, management, agriculture and the professions would meet voluntarily as a means for "securing mutual understanding among leaders of power groups."

5 Lost Airmen Sent Cheer Word

SEATTLE, Wash.—(UP)—A message of encouragement echoed through the woodlands of Princess Royal Island yesterday from a plane loud-speaker in the hope it would lend cheer to five American airmen, missing since they parachuted from their crippled B-36 six days ago.

A Coast Guard PBY cruised low over treetops, its loud-speaker repeatedly blaring this message: "Don't give up hope; we are still looking for you."

NEW FULTON PATROL 'WAGON' READY

Thugs, Slickers, Gals All 'Paddy's' Customers

By FRANK MAJORS

"Paddy" has been retired but, unlike other legendary vehicles, few of the thousands who knew her best are going to mourn her passing.

For "Paddy" was Fulton County's first prisoner transfer bus. Her steady customers were the habitual thieves and thugs, the slick guys and the remorseful gals, the repeaters in almost every known crime.

All were making short trips—the distance between Fulton Tower and the Courthouse where they were to stand trial. Many of them made the return trip, by far the saddest.

But the frequent daily journeys took their toll on "Paddy" just as it did some of the passengers, and she fell on bad days. A gleaming red, new Fulton Patrol No. 2 goes into service this week.

In the 20 years since her purchase by the Fulton County Commissioners, "Paddy" has rolled up thousands upon thousands of miles. Back and forth. Back and forth. Sometimes carrying a doomed murderer, sometimes a notorious confidence man, and again just an unfortunate citizen afoul of the law for the first time.

Occasionally the "old red wagon," as some of the drivers and jailers called her, was pressed into more urgent service. She made one trip to Gainesville with a load of workers, nurses and doctors to render aid following the destructive tornado.

Many times in bad weather, the jurors who were to decide the fate of some of "Paddy's" morning load of passengers were carried to lunch or to a hotel for the night.

Even they had to be locked in for the trip. For "Paddy's" interior of sheet guage steel was fashioned so that a drop bench unfolded to block the only exit.

This and other features of the body's homemade design were worked out with the aid of the Commissioner who first requested the County purchase the vehicle. He is presently Superior Court Judge Walter C. Hendrix.

Judge Hendrix as a Commissioner in 1929 thought it offensive to the sensibilities of more peaceful citizens to see marching files of chained prisoners walking back and forth between the Courthouse and jail.

So motor transportation was provided. The unsightly procession ceased.

Only three men are recalled who have spent a considerable period of time driving "Paddy." Two of them are Deputy Sheriffs Paul Curtright and George Rayner. The third is believed to have been Hort Anderson, probably the first regular driver.

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT on 30-Day Test of Camel smokers...

Not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking CAMELS!

MAKE A NOTE... REMEMBER YOUR THROAT!

VOICE COACH Roy Campbell: "I tried many brands before I found the cigarette that agrees with my throat. The 30-Day Test convinced me that Camels are mild—cool and mild! Now it's Camels for me for keeps!"

HOUSEWIFE Polly Barker: "I know I'll never sing on the stage, but cigarette mildness counts with me, too. The 30-Day Test certainly won me to Camels. They're the mildest, best-tasting cigarette I've ever smoked!"

SCHOOL TEACHER Mary Turner: "Giving daily classroom lectures is far from easy on my throat. I smoke Camels and only Camels. They agree with my throat. They're so wonderfully mild. Wonderful tasting, too!"

HERE'S THE TEST! Smoke only Camels for 30 days! Compare them in your "T-Zone" (T for throat, T for taste). See if you don't agree that Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette you ever smoked.

Yes, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

JOHN BRADBERRY

Traveling With 'Ki' Was Lots of Fun

The shock of Ki Ki Cuyler's death hit all his friends around the Southern Association a tremendous blow.

Ki was a great buddy to the sportswriters, being an unending source of good stories which made column tasks lighter. So as soon as the third-base coaching box as though it were the bridge of a battleship—dispatched orders with the hard confidence of a commanding officer.

"Ki was one of those last and resolute men you never seem to associate with death and so this impact becomes more stunning when we read that his tough heart stopped at last. But it must be admitted that few hearts have been more sorely tried, for Mr. Cuyler was a playing associate of Babe Herman, manager of Les McGarity and a subject for the literary themes of F. M. (Old Ironsides) Williams, of The Atlanta Constitution sports staff.

"All three are most colorful personalities, but there must have been times when Mr. Cuyler longed for sketches in severe black and white—for sanity in all its uncompromising dullness.

"Old Ironsides is one of the most forceful volunteer strategists we have ever encountered and it is impossible to avoid his advice unless you happen to be an Eskimo with punctured eardrums. For F. M. was poorly named. You see, frequency modulation is merely line of sight—can be stopped by mountains too fragile to squeeze even an echo from the Williams voice when the latter is operating under full throttle.

"No sooner had Mr. Cuyler agreed to manage the Atlanta ball club than Old Ironsides agreed to furnish helpful hints concerning the selection of relief pitchers and pinch-hitters plus the psychological instant for their insertion. Mr. Williams was at no time mediocre, but we feel that he reached the ultimate of his forte one Sunday afternoon at Busch Stadium—on Sunday afternoon in 1948.

"The Chickasaws had stepped on their own tongues in the second game of a double-header and, with two men out in the last of the seventh (the last inning under such circumstances), the Crackers were leading by six runs and not a Chickasaw occupied a cushion. Relieved of all pressure, Mr. Williams sat down to write his story and had manufactured two stylish paragraphs when the Chick at bat goofed a single over second. The next drew a fourth ball.

"All right, Cuyler," bugled Old Ironsides. "Warm up Brown."

"Mr. Cuyler remained cold to the suggestion and a double disturbed the silences of right field. This time Old Ironsides pushed back his typewriter to supply fighting space for his diaphragm and thundered:

"Get Brown in the bullpen and get Lindquist hot behind him!"

"Another fourth ball followed and Old Ironsides, now swinging for his heels, called for Kinney in addition to Brown and Lindquist. Mr. Cuyler sent Kennedy to the bullpen and Old Ironsides was being severely critical when Mr. Gordon Goldsberry cleared the right-field wall with a blow which tied the score.

"Send in Perkovich!" screamed Mr. Williams, overlooking the fact that Mr. Perkovich was sitting on the Chickasaw bench drawing nourishment from a Chickasaw salary. "Send in Walter Johnson," sent in Hal Newhouse!"

"By the time Mr. Ollie Kelly sent the winning run tinkling across with a single, Mr. Williams was speaking gibberish which fell blankly upon our ears, but was probably quite intelligible to Mr. Cuyler, who had the advantage of long association."

All of this brings to mind another classic involving Mr. Williams and Mr. Cuyler. This one happened in the classbox at Nashville which passes for a baseball park and where customers feel they have had a bad night unless 25 runs are scored in each game.

The Crackers went in to Nashville during Cuyler's reign as manager for a three-game series. Mr. Williams, deadlines staring him in the face, nearly had apoplexy in the series opener as he went to the test scores and then the other and the thing dragged long past the 2½-hour for the course.

Finally, Nashville scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth to win by a score of something like 13-12, and Mr. Williams was fit to be tied, as they say.

Well, the same thing happened the next night and Moefield's blood pressure had exceeded the safety point. Again Nashville won, 10-8, this time.

The Crackers were due to catch a train after the third game and Mr. Williams realized he would be sorely pressed for time enough to file his lead and make the train. The third game went as the other two. Atlanta would get two or three runs ahead and Nashville would tie it up. Then the Vols would go ahead and the Crackers would rally.

The Crackers popped a homer over the right-field screen in front, but somebody popped a homer over the right-field screen with two on and it was tied. The Crackers got one in the top of the tenth, but Nashville again tied it up. Then Atlanta scored twice in the 11th and Mr. Williams was sure this was the end. But the first Vol singled and the next one walked.

Train-time was rapidly approaching and Mr. Williams had already missed three editions. Finally he could stand the agony no longer and he pushed back his typewriter in the pressbox, leaned as far out as he could and bellowed as only Mr. Williams can bellow to Cuyler in the third-base coaching box:

"For heaven's sake, Ki, give 'em the damn game and let's get the heck out of this place!"

It was one of Ki's favorite stories.

Coaltown $100,000 Race at Mercy And Armed Of Calumet's Trio Favorites

Ponder May Repeat Victory Over Citation; Two Lea Entered

Calumet Ready For $50,000 Race

MIAMI, Fla.—(P)—Despite a defeat in the warmup McLennan Handicap, the Calumet Farm entry of Coaltown and Armed has been established by handicappers as a 3-to-5 favorite to take Saturday's $50,000 mile and a quarter Widener.

Confidence in the training skill of plain Ben Jones is reflected in the pre-race odds. Warren Wright's horses have won three of the last four Wideners and Jones always has his racers at peak form when it counts the most.

Although he finished third, many experts thought Coaltown—winner last year equalled or bettered world speed marks at six different distances—gave a creditable performance in the McLennan and the effort was what he needed to put him on edge for the Widener.

They point out that in the McLennan Coaltown spotted the rest of the field from 15 to 27 pounds at a mile and an eighth without benefit of a tuneup race.

Three Rings, the McLennan winner, was listed as the 3-1 second choice, with Royal Governor, a fast-closing second in the McLennan, third choice at 5 to 1.

Gold Away and First Nighter are quoted at 20-to-1 in the pre-race line, along with Ol Skipper, Loser Weeper and Bug Juice.

Clockers reported Royal Governor turned in a sensational workout Saturday, going a mile and an eighth in 1:50 2/5, only 1/5 second off the winning time for the McLennan at the same distance. His time for the three-quarters was 1:12 and for the mile 1:37 3/5.

Tech Gym Team Loses in Meet

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—(P)—Florida State University's gymnastics team defeated Georgia Tech, Southeastern AAU champions, 68-44, here over the weekend.

The victory sends FSU to the Midwestern AAU Tournament in Chicago next week undefeated.

Bill Roetzheim, of Chicago, was the high scorer with 24 points. He won every event in which he competed for FSU. Bob Anderson, of Atlanta, was high point man for Tech with 12.

Tech took first in tumbling and trampoline competition.

Robinson Receives Cuts In Florida Auto Crash

MELBOURNE, Fla.—(P)—Welterweight boxing champion Ray Robinson suffered two minor cuts on his arm when the automobile in which he was riding collided with another here early yesterday.

Warren Jones, one of Robinson's trainers, was driving the custom-built car in which eight persons were riding when it collided with another automobile. The Robinson car overturned twice, according to the fighter's wife.

She said the fighter did not require hospitalization and the party continued to Miami.

Cleveland May Sell Million Advance Tickets

CLEVELAND—(P)—The Cleveland Indians think they can sell 1,000,000 advance tickets for the 1950 season—something no major league club ever has done.

So far about 900,000 tickets have been sold, and the baseball pennant race opening is two months away. Nate Dolin, newly-appointed chief of stadium operations, said "It looks as though we should reach 1,000,000 easily."

Holy Cross Only Quint Undefeated

Tourney Picture Somewhat Clouded

NEW YORK—(P)—College basketball's postseason tournament picture is somewhat clouded with only Holy Cross and Ohio State virtually assured of participation.

The Crusaders (22-0), only major unbeaten five in the nation and the No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll, are first in line for the District One berth in the NCAA tourney. The Crusaders, who were under consideration for the 12 team National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden, announced they would not accept a NIT bid but would take the NCAA bid.

Ohio State is running away with the Big Ten race and the winner of that battle usually is selected to represent District Four in the NCAA extravaganza.

LaSalle, St. John's, Duquesne and CCNY also are in the running along with Syracuse, Villanova and Columbia for the District Two bid in the NCAA tournament. Duquesne and St. John's appear to have the inside track.

Kentucky, defending NCAA champion, and North Carolina State are chief contenders for the NCAA's District Three berth. The Wildcats are a close second in the Southeastern Conference race while the Wolfpack enjoys a light edge in the Southern Conference race.

Bradley and St. Louis in the Missouri Valley Conference and Kansas State and Nebraska in the Big Seven are the candidates for the District Five slot. District Six finds Arkansas of the Southwest Conference and Arizona of the Border Conference.

Wyoming stands a good chance of landing the District Eight berth usually goes to the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference championship. At the moment Washington State and Oregon are in the Northern division and UCLA in front in the Southern.

Here's the picture in the various conference races at a glance:

BIG TEN—Ohio State with a 9-1 mark up about in Wisconsin's second year of a 2-2 record. Saturday the Buckeyes trounced Northwestern, 48-46, while Wisconsin knocked off Iowa, 58-56, and Illinois, 64-52, Saturday night.

BIG SEVEN—Kansas State and Nebraska tied for lead with 6-2 states. Colorado, 6-2, and Oklahoma, 5-3, are tied for second. Saturday the Sooners topped Purdue, 60-50.

SOUTHERN—North Carolina State leading with 11-2 and William and Mary, 10-3, are tied for second. Saturday the Tar Heels topped Virginia Military, 74-50, while William and Mary topped Virginia Tech, 64-52.

WAKE FOREST—Wake Forest nipped The Citadel, 62-57, Saturday night. Davidson, 64-51, and Maryland edged Davidson, 64-51, Saturday night.

MISSOURI VALLEY—Bradley and St. Louis are tied for lead with 7-1. Bradley took care of Wichita, 58-56, and St. Louis disposed of Drake, 79-54, while Tulsa topped Detroit, 53-49, to drop the Titans to a tie for first with Oklahoma A&M.

SKYLINE SIX—Wyoming in the van with 10-0 and Oregon, 9-1, are tied for second. Saturday the Tigers topped Oregon, 74-57, and Penn State topped Cornell, 74-57.

Kentucky, Vandy Seeded on Top

Tech, Georgia to Play Vols, Ole Miss Thursday

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Kentucky, Vanderbilt, Auburn and Alabama were seeded in that order yesterday as the Southeastern Conference Basketball Committee drew up pairings for the annual tournament at Louisville March 2-4.

All seeded places carry first-round byes.

Always-powerful Kentucky rated the top position despite its present second-place rating in the unofficial SEC race. Vanderbilt is currently holding down the high notch.

Auburn's surprising Tigers were ranked third, which is their place in the standings. Hot and cold Alabama grabbed the fourth place in seedings although it has slipped into a tie with Georgia for fifth place.

Florida and LSU open the tournament at 2:30 p. m. (Atlanta time), Thursday, March 2. Tennessee and Georgia Tech play in the next upper bracket, first-round game at 4:15.

On Thursday night, lower bracket contests send Mississippi against Georgia at 8:30 p. m., and Mississippi State against Tulane at 10:15.

Auburn meets the winner of the Florida-LSU scarp Friday at 12:30 p. m. Vanderbilt opposes the winner of the Tennessee-Tech contest at 4:15.

Alabama moves against the Mississippi-Georgia victor at 8:30 Friday night, with Kentucky opposing the survivor of the Mississippi State-Tulane tilt at 10:15.

Semifinals will be played Saturday morning, March 4, with the championship game scheduled for Saturday night at 9:30.

The basketball committee includes Cliff Wells, Tulane; Roy Mundorff, Georgia Tech; Bernie Shively, Chairman, Kentucky, and Jeff Coleman, Alabama. This group met with SEC Commissioner Bernie Moore to draw up pairings.

73-YEAR-OLD 'ROOKIE' ATTENDS BASEBALL SCHOOL

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(INS)—Some guys take literally the old adage that "You're never too old to learn."

Rogers Hornsby, who thought he'd seen almost everything during his baseball career, learned differently when he opened registrations at Hot Springs, Ark., for his baseball school.

One of the first to sign up for the rugged course was a Milwaukee cap manufacturer, George J. Kromer.

The "Rajah," 53, doesn't want to discourage any students interested in the sport but thought Kromer might be kidding. Then when Kromer insisted, Hornsby said he'd make Kromer's registration strictly on "the house" and there'd be no charge.

But Kromer, who said he would be out for all of the physical training and preliminary exercises next week, insisted he'd pay and be a regular student.

That makes Kromer the oldest student to register at any baseball school anywhere, according to Hornsby.

Grid Players Costly; Nevada In Hole $45,000

RENO, Nevada.—(P)—Little University of Nevada's big-time football aspirations were snagged yesterday on a $45,000 deficit in the athletic scholarship fund.

This came to light when the University Board of Regents asked the Downtown Boosters Club what it intends to do about that amount the club owes the university for tuition, feeding and housing athletic students.

Here's the set up: The Downtown Boosters—Reno business men—gives a $1,000 scholarship to a promising athlete. About 40 such scholarships are in effect during football season.

But the club reported inability to raise enough money to pay for the scholarships. The university agreed to foot the bill for housing and feeding until the funds could be raised. The bill now is $45,000.

George Southworth, Jr., President of the Boosters, told the regents bluntly "the cost of athletes is going up."

"In order to get anybody to play, we have to pay them well," he added.

"The University of San Francisco and St. Mary's give five times as much in scholarships as Nevada does," said Harry Frost, Chairman of the University Board of Athletic Control. The board is a quasi-independent board of students, faculty and alumni which controls Nevada sports and is trying to make them self-supporting.

The world's pocket billiard session also ended in a tie with Irving Crane, of Birmingham, N. Y., moving into a playoff with defending champion Willie Mosconi of Barrington, N. J. Crane matched Mosconi's record of 4-2 by drubbing Willie, 15-14, in four innings. Crane started with a high run of 71 then posted 38 in the third inning and then 41 and out, winning number, 78.

DiMaggio Tired Of Being Sick, Hurt

OVER THE HILLS

Where are the champions I once knew? Lost in the land where dreams come true? Dempsey, Ruth and the slashing Cobb, Jones and Thorpe on the winning job—Matty and Johnson—Alex and Cy, Rainbows gone from a golden sky? "Over the hills"—the gray winds say, "Over the hills and far away."

LOS ANGELES—Joe DiMaggio came down from San Francisco a few days ago to call on some of his Southern California pals. While lingering in this vicinity, Joe admitted that he was harboring or nursing a very pleasant dream.

"That dream," DIM said, "is to start the season in first-class condition and play more than 140 games. I'm tired of being sick or hurt at the start of too many seasons."

Joe never looked better than he does now, packing his bat for another extended visit to St. Petersburg. He has recovered his lost weight, his color is good, and he is evidently a physically fit man.

"I didn't come into baseball yesterday," he said, "I've been around a long time—about 12 years at San Francisco and New York. There are very, very few now around who were on hand when I went East some 15 years ago. But I still don't feel old. I can move around about as fast as I did 10 or 12 years ago. My arm never felt better. A ball player is only as old as his arm and legs are."

"How about the heel?" we asked, giving Joe his chance to answer this query for the 200th time or maybe the 600th time. "This time I expect to be all set," he said. "I won't be in quite as big a rush in my training, and I have a special shoe that helps protect the heel."

Effortless Style One factor that has kept Joe young for so long is his effortless style. He makes every play look easy. There is never any sign of straining or overtrying. He is a drifting, shifting ghost, with perfect timing.

An outfield that carries DiMaggio in center is on its way to being a very good one. Certainly from Woodling, Bauer, Mape, etc., Casey Stengel should have little trouble in setting up a high-grade outfield.

DiMaggio recognizes the all-around strength of the Boston Red Sox.

"They'll get much better pitching this year," Joe said, "and we'll have to keep moving. The Red Sox won't be any 12 or 13 games back around July fourth this year. But we are not due to get so many rough bumps again. I don't believe that could happen twice. All we need is for Rizzuto and Page to have the same sort of season they had in 1949. If they do, I don't think anything can stop us." DiMaggio thinks, with many others, that Detroit will be the most improved team this season. "They have a lot of pitchers who can bother you—and the mound is where a flock of ball games is won," Joe admitted. "More than most people know about."

Blues Beaten By Goldblumes

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(P)—The Nashville Goldblume sextet scored its second win over Atlanta's Sports Arena Blues in two days by downing the visiting girls, 36-27, here yesterday. Saturday the Nashville team beat Atlanta, 39-26.

The Blues jumped into a 10-6 first-quarter lead and increased it to 19-10 at halftime.

The Atlanta team, paced by Peggy Ryan, cut the deficit to three points at the end of the third quarter, but the Nashville girls pulled away in the final period.

Lurlyne Greer poured in 17 points for Nashville. Miss Ryan collected 12 for Atlanta.

Burke's 264 BERT PRATHER

Wins Open Golf Meet

Dahlbender's 275 Fails for Money

HARLINGEN, Texas.—(P)—Stocky Jack Burke, Jr., of White Plains, N. Y., another Texan in the golfing firmament, yesterday ripped in with a six-under-par 65 to capture first money in the $10,000 Rio Grande Valley Open by two strokes.

Curly-haired Jack, son of one of Texas' famed professionals, eagled the eighteenth to better the tournament record for 72 holes.

Burke's closing 65 brought him a total of 264, two strokes under the record set in 1941 by Henry Picard.

Coming in the last threesome, Burke grinned broadly at the jammed gallery (an estimated 5,000), around the final green as he sank a two-footer for his eagle on the par 5, 500-yard hole.

Big Skip Alexander, of Knoxville, Tenn., shot a 66 on his final round to finish second with 268, while tied for third were Henry Ransom, St. Andrews, Ill., who equalled the competitive course record with a 63, and Fred Haas, of New Orleans. Both had 267.

Gene Dahlbender, of Atlanta, fired a fine 66 on the final round but failed to get in the money with his 68-69-72-66—275.

The wind-swept, dusty Harlingen Municipal course that covers 6,095 yards, was given a terrific battering in the final round.

9 Under Par No Good

We hope Gene Dahlbender, Jr., doesn't become discouraged, but if he does we could hardly blame him. Yesterday the long-hitting Atlanta carved out a five under 66 to finish with a fine 275, nine under par, in the Rio Grande Open at Harlingen, Texas, but all he got out of the tournament was the experience. It took a 273 or better to make the money list. Pretty fast company these touring professionals.

'What the Law Could Not Do'

Among a number of critical letters I have received lately from Negroes is one from a university teacher. He thinks I am too conservative, that I am not liberal enough, that I am a gradualist and a defender of segregation, and so on.

In other words, he thinks I am intellectually dishonest and intellectually venal, and I think him to be a fool of the all-or-nothing-right-now variety. I do not name him or his school, for the very good reason his school is an excellent one. It receives too little help and co-operation from the community as it is, and one reason for it is because too often fools of the sort get into print.

He employs a familiar technique. It was employed by Lillian Smith, for example, in her review of Huddell Carter's book. She (deliberately, I assume, since there could hardly have been any misunderstanding) quoted him as saying things he emphatically did not say, distorting some of his statements.

Segregation I do not suppose any honest person defends compulsory segregation as an institution. Certainly it is productive of much that is iniquitous. It is not democratic or American in principle. But a great many of us, including me, say that it cannot and should not be abolished by fiat or decree. And, furthermore, nowhere in the civil rights bill, even the omnibus bill, is it suggested the Federal Government so abolish it. A great many of us say that it would not be enforced if it were abolished. It is obvious that segregation is losing some of its edges in higher education, in travel and in the everyday business of life. So it is perfectly true that I have said, and believe, that segregation should not be abolished by Federal fiat. There will be degrees of it. There may come some such edicts in the matter of education, which will work itself out when it does come. I follow the Lincoln spirit and technique. I hope it is clear that I am against a Federal decree, and I hope it is understood none is suggested by the President.

Employment We ought to have an end to discrimination in employment. Some sort of employment commission would be helpful. But I am against an FEPC with jail sentences as sanctions. I think if we ever start providing separate bureaus with enforcement police methods, we will create a police state which no one will like. I want less police methods in government, not more. I do not see why an FEPC under the Department of Labor with powers of investigation, conciliation, and so on, would not win wider acceptance than a "thou-shalt" bill. In fact, I know it would.

This is a national problem, with the emphasis on us. There still exists segregation in more schools in the North than in those that do not have it. There still are counties in northern States which do not allow Negroes to live in them or even to remain in them overnight. Segregation and discrimination exist there, too, although, of course, on a generally lower level. I do not say this to accuse the North, but merely to illustrate that it is stupid and harmful to try to isolate the South as a single entity in which all evil and wrong exist. That is why there is more resistance. The Negro, having been and still being a whipping boy for Southern demagogues, ought to understand that a region reacts in the same manner as he does.

Law I would like to close with a quotation from Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, from an essay of his: "What the Law Cannot Do." It is taken from his book, "On Being Fit To Live With." It reads:

"In the eighth chapter of Paul's letter to the Romans a familiar verse begins with an arresting phrase: 'What the law could not do.' The limitations of law, the things that legal regulation cannot accomplish—that should be worth considering in a generation like this, when we are tempted to trust laws and more laws, government and more government, to save the world."

"Now Paul honored law. As a Jew, the moral law laid down in Scripture had his full devotion, and as a Roman citizen he was bound to live under the most majestic structure of civil law the world had known."

"In the long run, the law can get out of the people no more goodness than there is inside the people. The law is much like a pump, and the water it pumps is the intellectual, moral and spiritual life of the people—no better, no worse."

"Once in this country we had a prohibitory law concerning alcoholic liquors, constructed with all the precision of legality and backed by a constitutional amendment, which, when it started working, what did it pump? Just what was inside the people, no less. However hard we worked the pump, it drew only what was in the people. In a generation trusting government for salvation, as few generations have ever done, we had better remember that."

BILLY ROSE

A Letter to Mr. Bing

Mr. Rudolf Bing,
Manager Metropolitan Opera House
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

When your appointment was first announced last Summer, I checked into your artistic background and opined in this column that Bing didn't figure to make much of a bang in these latitudes, but after reading the reports of your first press conference, I'd like to bend knee, bite tongue and admit I was wrong.

The thing which impressed me most was your announcement that you intend to hire singers only on the basis of limpidity and lung powers—in other words, from now and henceforth, the Met will select its personnel on the basis of their ability to sing, and not on the basis of their ability to sing. And, suiting deed to announcement, you promptly backed up this aesthetic principle by reporting you had optioned Kirsten Flagstad for 14 performances—in spite of the fact that, according to several bulging dossiers, she had entertained and been entertaining to the Nazis.

The signing of Miss Flagstad is certainly a step in the right direction, but having gone so far, wouldn't it be the part of wisdom to go the rest the way and, purely on a quality basis, engage other talents which could contribute to the successful operation of our most important opera company?

May I be specific:

Finances The Met's financial structure, as you know, is shakier than a flagpole stuck with the itch. Why, then, wouldn't it be good idea time over your budgetary problems to the wizard who did such an outstanding job for the nation Miss Flagstad embraced—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht?

And, as assistant to the good doctor, can you think of a better man than Frederick Flick, who kept the Nazi concentration camps going with practically no outlay for food? Along with a group of other efficiency experts, Flick was sentenced to death at Nuremberg ago, but through the solicitude of his highly placed American admirers, he is still alive—and undoubtedly available for you.

Management To effect the necessary shortcuts which are so important to a smooth operation, you might well consider engaging Otto Ohlendorf, sometimes referred to by vulgar journalists as the Tiger of the Ukraine. By installing time-saving devices in Southern Russia, this highly talented man was able to do away with 90,000 recalcitrants in the time it used to take to kill a mere 9,000.

To eliminate back talk from temperamental stars and get them to rehearsals on time, you might check on the possibility of hiring Lt. Gen. Oswald Pohl, the disciplinarian who routed 3,000,000 men, women and children to, but seldom from, the concentration camps. In his spare time, the General would be an ideal man to handle your Lost and Found Department—remember the impressive job he did sorting out the hair and gold teeth left behind by the transient visitors to Dachau and Auschwitz.

Staging To streamline some of your sloppier productions, why not contact Commissioner McCloy in Berlin and ask him to locate the inspired technician who used to stage the Nuremberg rallies. Remember those newsreel shots—split-second timing, Rembrandt lighting, every "Heil" where it ought to be.

Musicians Instead of paying out all that money to Mr. Petrillo's bumptious union, why not import one of the 100-piece orchestras which used to play Viennese waltzes to drown out the distracting noises emanating from the crematorium?

Wardrobe The perfect choice under your enlightened aegis would be the highly competent seamstress, Frau Ilse Koch, and if there's any carping about this selection, you can always argue that if she's good enough for Gen. Gail, she's good enough for you. In addition to her skill with the needle, the lady specializes in making lamp shades out of odds and ends, and her rich, satiny finishes would undoubtedly impart a homey touch to your backstage dressing rooms.

In closing, may I suggest a slogan to publicize the New Order at the Met—one that would be a real eye-catcher in electric lights over the marquee:

"QUALITY OVER ALLES."

Yours for perfection,

BILLY ROSE

The Development of Jekyll Assured

We are pleased to note that our favorable appraisal of the newly appointed members of the Jekyll Island Authority has been confirmed by Rep. Charles L. Gowen, of Glynn County.

We count Rep. Gowen's reaction important on two scores. In the first place, as a lifelong resident of St. Simon, he is in position to know firsthand the needs and opportunities which historic Jekyll presents. Secondly, having been so prominently identified with the anti-Talmadge forces over a long period of years, he would naturally have been assumed to be overly critical of the Governor's appointments to the newly created board.

Thus it is doubly reassuring to have Gowen declare: "Gov. Talmadge has appointed a nonpolitical Authority, which is an indication that he desires to remove Jekyll from politics. I know all of the members with one exception. And they are the type of citizens who will work with a view of making Jekyll a real resort."

It is a year, of course, before the expiration of the contract of the island's current lessee, but that will give the Authority ample time to study the situation thoroughly and blueprint a permanent program to make it the attraction it should be.

We have thought and said from the first that Georgia needed a coastal park.

We have defended the purchase of Jekyll as one of the best investments the State ever made.

And we now are certain that the right approach to its development finally has been found.

Let's Keep Up Our Vigilance

Frequently—and the frequency seems to be increasing—the crime news from other cities makes us grateful the Atlanta area is free from an organized underworld. We don't want to appear smug about it. But neither do we want our police and sheriffs to grow lax. That is why we like to bring up the matter often.

Any metropolitan area which allows gambling is letting itself in for trouble. Miami has found it out. So have other cities, including the nation's capital, which last week heard the report of a grand jury, which indicted 36 on gambling charges, declare the large sums of money obtained by professional gamblers "gives them the means whereby they constantly seek to carry on their illegal activities with a minimum of interference."

That simply means that gambling provides the funds for payoffs to susceptible policemen and municipal officials. It brings in other vices which may be far worse than gambling in itself.

Gambling is directed by a huge, national syndicate of criminals. This syndicate has tried to locate in the Atlanta area but, because we have honest law enforcement agencies and honest officials, they have failed.

We rather like the bill introduced into Congress by Rep. Prince Preston of Statesboro to outlaw interstate transportation of slot machines. That would help curb gambling. But we ought never to lose sight of the fact that gambling does not flourish where local law enforcement agencies are on the job and above corruption. Too many cities have started off by allowing "honest" gambling. Pretty soon, though, the syndicate moves in and takes over, whether the "honest" owner wants to sell or not. From there on out corruption breaks down all law enforcement and the debacle ends only when citizens awake from their apathy to find a scandal breaking.

Let's keep being vigilant here.

The Mighty Oak Is in Grave Danger

Magnolias may be in the Southern tradition but we've got a notion you will find the oak tree just as much loved. Particularly is that true of the giant water oak which, farther South, drapes itself in great curls of Spanish moss.

But the oak has more than sentimental value in the South. It is one of our most important hardwoods from a commercial standpoint. Some of the best stands of valuable oak lie in North Georgia.

But the oak tree, unless something can be done about it, is on the way out.

Already an invisible blight called oak wilt has ravaged parts of the West and North. It is creeping South and now is in the vicinity of Paducah, Ky., in that direction and is at the border of the Arkansas-Missouri line to the West. It is moving on Georgia at the rate of 50 miles a year. Scientists are working on the problem but they haven't made any headway and they don't give much encouragement. The blight, they say, is similar to that which wiped out the nation's chestnut trees some years ago. It is a fungus growth which is carried along by the wind. In action it chokes off the water-conducting tubes of the oaks, causing the trees to wilt and die.

It is a serious problem, and particularly so for our region. If it is not checked it will cause serious economic consequences all over the region and disaster in certain localities. It would be a great blow, too, to all those who value the oak for its majestic strength and beauty.

We hope the scientists can find a way to stop the blight. The Forest Service is working hard at the job. The agricultural schools and other agencies ought to help. Much more than sentiment is at stake. It is a matter of dollars and cents and jobs.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Truman Sets Campaign Keynote

WASHINGTON—Even the Republicans have been willing to concede that President Truman was in rare political form when he delivered his speech before some 5,300 party followers at the huge $100-a-plate Jackson-Jefferson Day dinner celebration of Democrats here the other night. Many observers are inclined to rate it as the most effective political discourse the President has yet been heard to make.

The speech was not only well prepared as to theme and text, but it was delivered with a technique that seemed to show a marked improvement over some of his past political performances. If he appeared to stumble over a word here and there, that was the fault of the brilliant lighting effects of the setting which made it difficult at times for him to read from his manuscript.

Mr. Truman has never been a spellbinder type of orator. He has more of the businessman's straight-from-the-shoulder manner of speaking. But the other night he seemed to have put his main points over with more expression, personality and force than has been his wont in the past.

Naturally it has left the Democrats elated and the Republicans a little more glum. Typical of much of the comment was the editorial statement of the staid old Washington Star, a Republican organ, that "it (the speech) made political sense." In a similar vein the Scripps-Howard newspapers, which usually follow the Republican line, said there was so much truth in what the President said that "the Republican Party's leaders might profitably take it to heart."

Both The Star and the Scripps-Howard papers were referring to the President's main theme in which he charged that the Republicans have too often stood for "negative inaction." With telling effect, Mr. Truman put over the point that the Republicans have too seldom offered affirmative programs of their own, that they have overworked such scare words as "welfare state" and "statism" and "socialism," that over the years they have constantly trumpeted warnings of economic and social disaster that failed to happen.

In this the President was taking the Republicans to task for the latest slogan put forward by the recent GOP policy declaration, which defined the leading issues of the day as "liberty against socialism." This, he said, was the same old story the Republicans have been shouting year after year—"the same old words and music, the same empty and futile attempts to scare the American people, in complete contradiction of the plain facts which are visible to every citizen in his daily life."

To back up his words, the President quoted from the various Republican Party platforms which have been adopted since 1936. Each one of them sounded some horrendous warning about the country traveling the road to Hades in a hurry, whereas today we have reached the highest levels of peacetime prosperity in all history.

Most impartial observers will agree that the President was hammering the Republicans on their weakest point. During the years they have been out of control of the Government the Party has definitely taken the defeatist line in about every new proposal advanced by a Democratic administration. They have chosen to find fault with too many things rather than to seek to improve the programs or offer something of their own. Maybe that has been the chief reason why the country has been unwilling to return them to power. Their tactics too often have been destructive rather than constructive.

And then there have been the continual shouts of warning against things that never happened. The people have heard the cries of "wolf" so often that they are no longer frightened. Typical of some of these past cries was the solemn warning back in the days before the war that the country faced national bankruptcy, if the public debt was allowed to reach $50 billion. Well, today it is more than five times that figure, and yet we are more prosperous than ever before.

From the tone and quality of the President's speech, it may be said to formally mark the opening of the 1950 congressional campaign. Mr. Truman has indicated that he plans to take the stump in the campaign almost as actively as he did in the presidential race of two years ago, when he pulled up at every whistle stop station that crossed his path. If his initial performance is indicative of what is to follow, the country may look to one of the most spirited congressional campaigns we have seen in years.

Safety In Numbers?

Seven Georgians have already announced as candidates for the governorship.

Many are called . . . or think they are.

Thus far, unfortunately, most of the State's gubernatorial timber again seems to be of the two-by-four variety.

One of the discouraging features of Georgia politics is that the candidate crop traditionally runs more to quantity than quality.

Those who run for Governor in Georgia can usually be divided into two classes: Either they aren't well enough known . . . or else they're known too well.

Of course, some variety is provided this time by the fact that two women have signified their intention of making the race. They'll probably get a lot of votes, too, if only from those who are ready to give up on the men.

As for the incumbent, he welcomes each new entrant with a more-the-merrier enthusiasm. Well does he know that in politics it is better to be outnumbered than out-matched.

That's why, as far as Herman is concerned, 13 would be a far luckier number than seven.

In fact, about the only thing causing the Talmadgites any concern at present is the report that Tom Linder may be one of the multitude to seek the governorship. They don't care how many hats are in the ring . . . so long as two of them aren't wool.

Hint to Highway Department

Editor Constitution: Your Mr. Channing Cope's article of Feb. 8, regarding road bank stabilization, was very timely, on a subject which I feel should be brought before the people and the State Highway Department until some reform is effected.

It seems the State Highway Department has numerous scrapers that cannot be used during rainy weather on dirt roads, so they get busy and scrape all the grass off the shoulders of paved highways. It doesn't seem to make any difference whether it is necessary or not and, as Mr. Cope brought out in his article, they think they are doing the people a favor but are only contributing to the erosion of our Georgia soil.

La Vista Road has not been ditched for over 10 years except by individual landowners. The marauding scrapers come by periodically and scrape only where there is a low place to push the grass. Before the grass can grow back the winter rains have washed runs in the shoulders and the scrapers are then busy on the dirt roads. It is discouraging to those of us who work in front of our places, keeping the shoulders cut and level and then have irresponsible crews come along and make mudholes along the shoulders for the greater part of the winter.

According to Mr. Cope, highway erosion contributes 40 percent of the total erosion in Georgia. Therefore may I urge you to try to educate the Highway Department on erosion, in the same manner you have worked on the farmers for the past several years.

First Move?

Editor Constitution: This current situation with Russia may or may not be as serious as we surmise; however, if she hatches the first hydrogen bomb on us, I hope I'm on foreign soil at the time.

If we don't strike first, it may not be wise to hang around waiting to get even. I never believed in arguing with a man standing over me holding an arsenal in each paw while I'm dinking on. What good would it do if we run to Harry with an atomic haircut serviced by a sudden Russian egg-laying? He wouldn't recognize us, anyhow, but it might dawn on him who the Kremlin barbers are when they chase up from the rear for the final trimming.

I'm not an individual who advocates mass human obliteration, but to play it safe I'd make the first move, rash as it might be, even if it did mean putting the other guy's neck in a noose, as you wouldn't feel conscience-stricken when you are pulling out yours simultaneously.

Protest

Editor Constitution: This is a protest against those who ruin the beauty of the highways and roads by throwing out boxes of paper and trash. In any direction you ride in and around Atlanta, the sides of the roads, especially on vacant lots, are boxes of such. It is an eyesore, and for the life of me I cannot see how the ones who mar the beauty of the roads can do such a thing.

Fulton County has a sanitary service, as well as Atlanta, and they would be glad to pick up the trash that was evidently taken from homes. We pay for this service, so why not give them the privilege of carrying out their duty?

It is easy to see the boxes are deliberately thrown there, for the boxes lie besides the trash. Let's keep Atlanta beautiful. It is a lovely town, and with a little co-operation from all of us we can ride on Sunday and enjoy the well-kept yards and homes.

Problem for Women, Too

Editor Constitution: I have found that Atlanta, as well as other cities in the United States, has an age category for working women which usually stops at 35.

There are plenty of women from 35 to 55, and even 60, who are able to hold down jobs from a physical standpoint, and from the standpoint of training, and who have excellent backgrounds. However, due to age limits, these women are forced into the background, some even resorting to housekeeping jobs or menial work of some kind.

Why? They can and do work rings around young, untrained girls. I myself am 50 and have been lucky. I have nearly 25 years of insurance background, yet in a Western State last year I was offered work in an insurance office—in the mailing department with a lot of other older women who had been discarded because of their age. We older women who must work, and have had years of training along certain lines, should not be thrown into the discard. We should be able to take our place in the business world and have our ability acknowledged by executives who should be far-sighted enough to be able to recognize our worth. FIFTY-YEAR-OLDER.

For Toll Road

Editor Constitution: Now while money is so cheap and plentiful would be the right time to build that toll road north and south through Georgia.

I think a Georgia company, not the State, should be allowed to build it. It would be a financial success for the company and a great joy and saving for the user and, as you state, cost the State nothing, also reduce road hazards because the old wired-together cars would not pay to use it.

School Rules

Editor Constitution: It is becoming more evident every day that a high school student has no freedom when going to school.

I am a high school student at Avondale High. I will admit it is one of the best high schools in the State of Georgia, but it also has some of the craziest rules in the State.

There is a rule that you cannot leave the campus at lunchtime. This is a good rule, but there is also another rule that bus people cannot leave the campus BEFORE SCHOOL after the bus arrives. There is also another rule prohibiting a boy and girl sitting on the steps together. Visitors are not permitted at lunchtime. These and a few other rules are why the high school student hasn't much freedom.

The Natural Gas Bill

WASHINGTON—After four years, a final test is due shortly in Congress on proposed amendments to the 1938 natural gas act which would break down regulation authority over natural gas long exercised by the Federal Power Commission and would open the way for price to 40,000,000 consumers. For the first time, a bill which would have these results now has reached the floor of the Senate. Twice the House passed similar measures—in both the Eightieth Congress and the present Eighty-first. The Rileys-Moore Bill, so-called, of the Eightieth Congress, the first version, was killed by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee; but the second version, a modification, slipped through that committee last session and now is up for action.

The purpose is to exempt from supervision and regulation by the FPC "arm's length" sales of natural gas by independent producers to pipelines in interstate commerce. "Arm's length" means that there can be no financial affiliation between producer and buyer and that there must be independent bargaining.

Big oil companies, which own the bulk of the nation's natural gas reserves, are pushing the amending bill. They would benefit handsomely. They are powerful politically, especially in an election year such as this. The amendments have been urged as needed to aid small producers, but the fact is that while there are 600 independent natural gas producers, two thirds of the total natural gas is sold by the 25 largest producers, and nearly half of this total by 10 companies.

An amendment to exempt small producers as such, on the basis of sales volume, was defeated last session by the house, which voted the general exemption for all. The amendment was sponsored by Rep. Crosser, Democrat, Ohio, Interstate Commerce Committee Chairman, who led the fight against the wholesale exemption sponsored by Rep. Harris, Democrat, Arkansas. Rep. Crosser and four other members of his committee said in a minority report that the Harris bill, which was passed, "by freeing a large segment of the industry from regulation, would benefit primarily a few large corporations which, because of their monopolistic control of gas reserves in the Southwest States would have almost unfettered power to fix the price of gas entering interstate transmission lines."

Neither does the Senate bill confine exemption to small producers, its sponsors, Sens. Kerr and Thomas, both Democrats and both from Oklahoma, have drafted an amendment to their bill for submission to the Senate that would direct the FPC to keep pertinent current information as to prices and competition and report to the President and Congress any "remedial action" deemed necessary. But this is nothing more than the Commission can do already. It is regarded as "sweetening" to get support, and apparently is serving that rationalizing object to some extent, though it has not satisfied proponents of sound and effective regulation, among them, labor organizations which are beginning to lay down a barrage upon the Senate against the Kerr-Thomas bill.

In a telegram to every senator, Nathan Cowan, CIO Legislative Director, called the bill "an unconscionable raid," said it would enhance value of reserves owned by big oil companies by ten billions of dollars and characterized the amendment referred to above as merely investigation "after the act."

In connection with this measure, it is interesting that the FPC has a hearing scheduled March 20 at Bartlesville, Okla., in a jurisdictional and rate investigation involving the Phillips Petroleum Company, one of the large natural gas producers and sellers. This will include sales to the newly constructed line of the Michigan-Wisconsin Pipe Line Company serving the four States of Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The FPC acted on complaints from the Wisconsin Public Service Commission and the Corporation Counsel of Detroit. The former complained that "no substantial basis" had been given for successive price increases which have taken place since the pipeline was projected in 1945 and before substantial deliveries had been made, while Detroit's Corporation Counsel said "the increase in the price charged Michigan-Wisconsin by Phillips . . . will increase the cost of gas to the City of Detroit by approximately $1,770,000 in the year 1953 as a minimum." The FPC estimated the increases over the original 1945 contract would total $5,000,000 annually and it found that Phillips is selling to other natural gas companies at prices substantially lower than the base price in its Michigan-Wisconsin contracts.

The bill before Congress would not permit such investigations by the FPC as in this current case, according to FPC officials, because of removal of the jurisdiction necessary, and thus could not properly protect the public interest.

A Dollar Meal for $1.80

To my intense surprise, I have just discovered that the Pennsylvania Railroad and I are wrangling with the same problem and getting nowhere at 100 m. p. h.

It never occurred to me that a soulless corporation might be having trouble with the grocery money, too. But to tell the truth, neither the Pennsy nor I can make ends meet in the diner.

I have just laid aside a formidable trade journal in which the Pennsy, the largest railroad in the U. S. A., comes clean with the confession that every $1 meal it serves in its diners costs the company $1.80 in the accounting office.

This intelligence fair takes my breath away! For there, in a nutshell, Dr. Anthony, is my trouble, too.

EVERY DOLLAR meal served in the Robb Manse costs $1.80, too. The only difference is that I don't need to have the news broken to me by an outside efficiency expert. I am related to one by marriage who keeps me constantly informed—and for free.

The poor, old Pennsy is just like any 1950 housewife. It starts out for the super-market, loaded to the gills with a $10 bill and confident it can feed the kids and the old man for at least the next three days.

The Pennsy no sooner gets inside the door and breaks the sawbuck to buy a package of cigarettes than wham! The money's all gone and the old Pennsy has nothing to show for it but a loaf of bread, a half pound of butter, two yards of frankfurters, a can of applesauce, three cents in change and a silly grin on its face.

So the Pennsy goes back to the auditor, says the price of food is up again, cries a little into its diesel and asks for another $10 to keep the home going until pay day. And the auditor snarls "Where's that 75 cents I gave you last week?"

WELL, SIR, the old Pennsy has tried everything. It put its smartest young executive on the job. It got in efficiency experts. It simplified its menus. It cut to the bone. But the dollar meal couraged, too. Its efficiency experts got nowhere. Mine is no bargain, either. The last time mine pounded the table and demanded economy in the kitchen, I meekly asked him to plan the next night's dinner. He did, too. All he wanted was sirloin!

The old Pennsy is doing everything in its power to pinch pennies in its diners, even as I. It is even doing its own laundry work, as an economy measure. And it thinks it will be able to save a lot of money as soon as its own printing plant is finished and it prints its own menus.

To me, this seems a heluva way to run a railroad. If the Pennsy has its own printing plant, why doesn't it just solve everything by printing money?

They're Just Spoiling Good Food

McLEAN, Va.—It was ladies' night at the McLean Lions Club, meeting in the big back room of the Volunteer Fire Department. The brothers decided to have something extra-special for what they call their Lionesses. Each wife received a red rose as she sat down to dinner, which had been prepared by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church. It was a superb meal and, since it figures prominently in the sorry tale I have to tell, I'd better list what we had to eat. First came a fruit cocktail. Then the hostesses brought roast turkey, corn bread dressing, giblet gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, stewed tomatoes with melted cheese, turnip greens, salad, pickles, radishes, hot rolls and butter.

The church ladies, who have a year-round contract to feed the Lions at their monthly meetings and who never have been accused of starving a customer yet, brought next two kinds of pie: hot apple and pumpkin with whipped cream. We washed this down with fine, strong coffee.

The Lions were stuffed to their collar buttons and the Lionesses to their necklines. It was a pleasant feeling and we sat there digesting our food while the Providence choir sang a few songs. This musical organization was a little top-heavy with sopranos, but it sounded good to the drowsy Lions and Lionesses. Then came the big feature of the evening.

The Chief Lion Tamer, a lawyer by day, introduced a Mr. Doom, who needn't be embarrassed here by seeing his real name in print. He was one of Washington's acknowledged experts on wars and how same should be fought.

He said a third war was inevitable and that we, meaning the Lions and the Lionesses, had better get ready for it now because it was going to be tough. He didn't like the way the Department of Defense was spending its billions; he said we might be attacked suddenly in the dark of night. By an atom bomb, maybe. Or possibly by one of those hell bombs.

The Lions began to flidget. A Lioness belched, delicately. One of my neighbors interrupted to say that we'd always won our wars—he personally had helped in the last two—and he wasn't much worried about the next one.

Mr. Doom said don't be too sure this time. What if an atom bomb landed unexpectedly? Yet, he doubted that one would, so long as Russia and ourselves ran neck-and-neck in the armament race.

One of the diners said he'd been reading in the paper about that Canadian scientist saying the whole world, including the Lions and Lionesses of McLean, would be burned to a small white ash 60 seconds after the first hydrogen bomb exploded.

Mr. Doom said maybe the Russians wouldn't drop one on us. His questioner said yes, but if they even tried one out for size in Siberia, that would mean the end of the world. Mr. Doom said with a smile that this was a chance we had to take. One of the Lionesses went, eek.

The meeting broke up. There wasn't a Lion or a Lioness, either, without a severe case of indigestion. Doc Jones, the druggist, who'd brought along a bottle of his own pills, took one. The rest of us went home for swigs of bicarb.

And if this kind of thing is going on across the land, as I understand it, is the church ladies might as well relax. Why worry about the quality of the food if the speechmaker's going to make the merry-makers sick?

WESTBROOK PEGLER

You Can't Mitigate the Crime

Acheson, Eleanor and other spiritual accomplices of Alger Hiss and a disgracefully large and loud element of editorial opinion have been trying to mitigate the great crimes which underlay this man's relatively petty crime of perjury. Their lines of argument hold that:

1. Whittaker Chambers was the more guilty because he procured treason to be done by others.
2. Chambers, too, lied on oath. He admitted that he did.
3. Many political adolescents of the Alger Hiss type were victims of the "illusion" of Communism and made political mistakes.

Chambers did take the initiative and did corrupt Alger Hiss in the interests of the Soviet Empire. He knew what he was doing and he made a cold-blooded decision for which he deserved to be shot by a firing squad. The plea of "confusion" is rubbish. The more disgusting when it is offered by the Washington Post. No person is allowed to join the Communist Party or its confidential apparatuses who is not exceptionally intelligent. Most traitors of this group are double-domes. Many of them, like Hiss, from Harvard Law. Even an illiterate has no excuse to betray his country. Many a one has been shot on suspicion, but only an ignorant might be given the benefit of the doubt that the Washington Post tries to invoke for Hiss.

Hiss was not confused.

Granting that Chambers was the tempter, however, his guilt was no worse than Hiss' once Hiss fell. This was morally a capital crime, legally, by an ironic quirk it was little worse than smoking in the subway because we were not at war with Russia.

But Chambers repented, repented and tried to make reparation. States witnesses commonly get immunity. There is nothing unusual here.

His testimony on this point was, in part: "In 1937, I repudiated Marx' doctrines and Lenin's tactics, convinced that Communism is a form of totalitarianism, that its triumph means slavery to men and spiritual ruin to the human mind and soul."

Hiss never confessed or tried to repair the wrong he had done his own people who had put him on trust.

Chambers never held nor sought a position of trust. Therefore, whoever holds against Chambers the fact that he made the approach must admit that Hiss had a greater responsibility. Betrayal is totally bad, but we put a special burden on public officers who swear allegiance and a special degree of guilt on them when they rat on us.

From 1939 until the end of the recent Hiss trial in New York, Chambers tried to get someone to listen to him and act on his story. He did everything a truly penitent man could do to raise the alarm. He was frustrated everywhere by the resolute apathy of a corrupt Government.

In 1939, with Isaac Don Levine, he went to Marvin McIntyre, of the White House Secretariat. Chambers asked McIntyre how he could get Roosevelt's ear. He wanted to tell his story. McIntyre sent him to A. A. Berle, a babbling four-flusher of the Harvard law clique with an amazing gift for saying nothing and then tossing in a snide remark to unsay even that. He is another Frankfurter man and his testimony reveals the windy, emphatic, noncommittal incoherence of the old master of double-talk. Berle was an assistant secretary of state and was, McIntyre told Chambers, "Mr. Roosevelt's man in intelligence matters."

Chambers and Levine spent an evening with Berle. Berle "checked with" Acheson, who was Assistant Secretary of State with Hiss for his assistant. Berle knew there were leaks in the State Department because confidential informants were appearing in Drew Pearson's column and one of Pearson's "leg-men" was pretty intimate in that office. Pearson had one leg-man named Dave Katz, alias Karr, who had worked on the Communist Daily Worker in New York.

Berle said Acheson and Hiss were together in a pro-Russian group in the State Department. He stamped his foot, slapped his gloves and waved his handkerchief in a terrific brawl of the bull-butterflies and present was shipped off to Brazil as ambassador. He had "got trimmed in that fight" and that was all it meant to A. A. Berle.

This discussion has covered all the points of appeal set forth for Hiss by his unofficial defenders but there is one more important fact to be weighed.

Chambers went through hell to alone for his crimes. He was baited like an animal in two trials. His wife was put to torture. He lost his good job. He is dependent on the milk from some cows on a mortgage farm for a living for his family. He didn't have to give himself up. He did it voluntarily.

He knowingly and bravely faced all this to atone for wrong and even down to the hour of the first trial he still sacrificed himself in an effort to convert Hiss back to Communism.

That was how he involved himself in perjury. He didn't perjure himself to convict Hiss. He did it to spare him. When all failed, he came clean.

In none of this voluntary defense of Alger Hiss will you find a note of forgiveness for George Sylvester Viereck or William Dudley Pelley, convicted of doubtful and very inferior crimes and put away for long prison terms and ruined. These two were defendants in political cases which will become historic like the horrible disgrace of the Abraham Lincoln assassination cases.

No such doubts can be advanced on behalf of Alger Hiss.

You Have a Vital Stake in Telephone Bargaining:

It's YOUR money that pays telephone wages

Southern Bell Wages and Working Conditions Already Are Among the Best—Any Increase in Wages Would Have To Be Paid by Telephone Customers—There Is No Other Way Wage Increases Can Be Paid

You have a vital stake in telephone wage negotiations, for it's the money you pay in to us that we pay out in telephone wages.

Telephone employees are well paid. We believe you will agree after looking over the wages paid fully experienced employees here, shown in the box at the right.

Telephone wage rates have been increased 117% since 1939, compared with an increase of less than 70% in the cost of living.

But wages are not the whole story. Telephone employees have the advantage of steady work, with no seasonal layoffs. They get vacations with pay, up to three weeks, plus six holidays a year. In addition, they enjoy the real security provided by one of the best pension and benefit plans in any industry. Among other things, it provides:

- A pension with a minimum of $100 a month, including Social Security, at age 65, and liberal provisions for earlier retirements.
- Sickness and accident benefits, up to a full year's pay, depending on length of service.
- Death benefits, up to one full year's wage, depending on length of service.

For all these benefits, the employee pays nothing—the Company pays all

Any way you look at it—wages, working conditions, pensions and benefits—telephone employees are doing all right. And that's the way we think it should be. It takes all these things to get and keep good people.

HOW DO THESE ATLANTA WAGES LOOK TO YOU?

A telephone operator at the top rate here now gets average pay of $49.66 a week ($216.02 a month) including differentials and overtime.

Plant craftsmen, such as central office repairmen, at the top rate here now average $80.18 a week ($348.78 a month) in total pay, including overtime and differentials.

The telephone business is regulated in a way that Unions and most other businesses are not. Federal and State Commissions determine the rates we charge for service. Any increases in telephone wages would force us to ask for an increase in telephone rates.

What About the Contract?

Southern Bell and the CWA-CIO are engaged in collective bargaining on wages at the request of the Union. We earnestly hope that a settlement can be reached that will be fair to the employees, to telephone users and to the Company. Meanwhile, the public has every right to expect uninterrupted service under the present contract between the Company and the Union, which provides that, quoting the contract itself, "UNDER NO CIRCUMSTANCES MAY IT (the contract) BE TERMINATED EARLIER THAN JUNE 5, 1950."

New Baby Insurance
For Expectant ParentsBy DORIS LOCKERMAN
Constitution Staff Editor

In the future when the doctor nods his head in that here-comes-the-stork way in Atlanta and gives the order for the knitting of tiny garments, he will probably hand his lucky patients a card telling her to shoo in a donor to the Atlanta Red Cross Blood Center, and soon.

When he does, it will have no more ominous medical significance than his reminder that it might be a good idea to grab off a smock or two for the wardrobe and get out the family trundle bed and paint it with a fresh herd of puppies and teddy bears.

It will simply be baby insurance. Now before expectant parents become alarmed at any new trend in the way of blessed-events in this community, they should be told that this is part of a new program local obstetricians are sponsoring for the American National Red Cross Regional Blood Center.

Doctors have become convinced that persons even faintly likely to need transfusions in the foreseeable future are more responsible for blood being on hand than innocent bystanders who are only being neighborly.

This is a real departure from the old way.

In the past, the Red Cross has refused to put strings on the use of blood by suggesting that the recipients feel obliged to replace it, either through their families or friends. Hospitals often used that method to keep their supply of fresh blood constant, but the Red Cross did not conceive its service in that fashion. That organization believed in the idealistic theory that the possibility of saving a human life, even if it were that of a stranger, should be incentive enough to create standing-room-only conditions in the Blood Center.

This philosophy worked fine during the war. Danger, death, violence and fear moved the most phlegmatic citizens to rush down and offer their blood wherever it was needed.

Now that his changed. Somewhat it has never been as compelling or as dramatic to provide life-giving blood to dying civilians as it was to endangered warriors, but as the popularity of blood-giving has waned, science has found more and more use for blood and blood derivatives.

There have been times when the Red Cross has had to say no to patients in dire need of blood because the donors had dwindled to only a few of the faithful and generous.

The Fulton County Medical Association, composed of the doctors who are the ones who prescribe the blood, has initiated a new program to change the Red Cross Blood Bank deposit from a deficit to a surplus as quickly as possible.

Several new avenues of collection will be undertaken. A Rare Blood Club will be formed. Every patient scheduled for a major non-emergency surgical procedure will be asked to have at least one donor present himself to the Center, and families of emergency patients who use blood will be impressed with their moral obligation to replace such blood immediately after its use.

Doctors hope women will not be alarmed at the little card requesting them to send a friend or relative to the Blood Center, because it will probably only routine to them. The card is not presented.

Because it could just possibly be their own lives the expectant mothers were saving.

'DATELESS DIONNES'

Famous Quints Near 16;
Not Interested in Boys

By YOLANDE GWIN

The world's richest sisters—the Dionne quintuplets, who are "going on 16"—have never had a date.

And what's more, the young ladies confess that they aren't the least bit interested—yet.

This bit of teen-age information on the famous young girls of Callendar, Ontario, comes from Miss Lillian Barker, the Atlanta writer, who is recognized as the official biographer for the sisters, and who has penned millions of words on their life as well as the life of their parents since that day in 1934 when the miracle of birth was multiplied five times.

"The girls do not seem interested in going with the boys," Miss Barker said yesterday, "but seem happy, in contrast with the many 15-year-olds of the world who are dating, and their mother, Elzire Legros Dionne, was 16 years old when she married Olive Dionne, who was six years her senior. Many wonder when romance will come into their life, but when I made my last visit with them just a few months ago, romance was the farthest thing from their mind. And that was on the eve of their journey to Corbett, Ont., where they attended the marriage of their sister, Rose-Marie, to Maurice Girouard, in the Sacred Heart Church."

Miss Barker made these statements as a result of her last visit to the Dionne home—the fortieth since their birth—and was certainly qualified to give some of the "inside story" of these five eligible young girls.

"Every one of the girls is a born musician," said the Atlanta newspaper woman, "and play Chopin and Brahms with the ease of professionals. Yvonne, however, seems more inclined toward the arts, and enjoys painting animals, especially horses. Perhaps she will be another Rosa Bonheur, who knows, Marie likes to sing, and every one of them likes to cook, too. They are all very feminine and love clothes. At the marriage of their sister, they decided at the last minute to wear conventional uniforms—powder blue blouses and navy blue jumpers, to match those of their outside classmates, who with the sisters sang at the wedding. I was amused when someone at the reception asked if they were going to try to catch the bridal bouquet when their sister tossed it away before leaving for her honeymoon. It was Cecile, who said they would reach for it like the rest of the girls there, but if they caught it they would present it to their sister Pauline, who was maid of honor."

Miss Barker denied the rumor that the quins would become nuns in the Roman Catholic Church.

"They are still studying at the convent, the Villa Notre Dame at Cubell, and the Mother Superior told me that they had not made up their minds what they wanted to do, and that any rumor that they had decided on a life for the church was entirely without foundation. The girls plan to attend college after they finish high school."

Miss Barker spoke to members of the Georgia writers group of the Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club on Friday, of which Mrs. Murray Howard is Chairman.

Good Food, New Products
Star at Poultry MeetingsBy AGNES REASOR OLMSTEAD
Constitution Home Economics Editor

Although the Poultry Industry Fact-Finding Conference last week in Kansas City was primarily concerned with problems of processing, production and research, the 1,800 people in attendance did devote some time to eating.

These industry folks were extremely loyal to their products. Over 100 of these were brought right into the dining room so we all could see our chicken being cooked!

With all these good poultry dishes we were fortunate, too, in having some beef. Standing rib of beef cut a half-inch thick and covering the entire plate was one dinner main dish. At a private party, given by one of the largest packers of canned chicken, we had superb Kansas City style barbecue—broiled steaks. They have a way of not only dressing some of the finest beef here but also of knowing the technique of ageing it properly and of broiling it to a crisp brown outside and rare inside doneness.

NEW PRODUCTS

Turkey broilers, 2 1/2 to 7 pounds, will soon be a feast for all. At present, these are sold by a Minnesota producer only in the Minneapolis area. Are they wonderful? Well, you decide, since about 2,000 to 3,000 are sold weekly.

"Chickens of Tomorrow" are absolutely beautiful birds with big thighs and broad breast.

M. Crawford Pollock, Vice President of C. A. Swanson & Sons, told of the new processing used in canning poultry. Today these products have a new flavor because the chicken is boned raw then cooked in the can. Time was when it was cooked, boned and cooked a second time in the can.

Chicken fat in consumer packages of a 10-ounce can and 1-pound frozen container is gaining popularity, too. Utilization of this fat just proves the poultry people have one thing in common with the meat packers, in whose town they are meeting—they both use everything down to the fat and the squeal.

Popular Dessert

Cake, fruit and whipped cream are pretty hard to surpass when it comes to a popular dessert. Bake a single layer of cake and spread generously with whipped cream. Then top with luscious canned fruit cocktail and cut in pie-shaped wedges to serve.

SIGN OF SPRING—Redder than a robin's breast is the linen ensemble above, one of the designs shown recently in Thelma Swafford's Spring and Summer fashion show. At right you see it with its pleated-back, peplumed jacket with huge pushed-up sleeves and black patent belt. At left, unharnessed, it turns out to be a bare-topped molded sheath, to stimulate Summer stag lines or further the cocktail cause.

GLASS OF FASHION

Spring and Swafford
Combine PartnershipBy MAYNITA GERRY
Constitution Fashion Editor

Spring will be full of a number of things... birds and bees and flowers, soft breezes and warm sunshine... and the latest designs of Thelma Swafford, whose Spring and Summer collection of clothes was presented recently in her Biltmore Place studio.

With only 12 months in the year and only 24 hours in the day, both nature and Mrs. Swafford were battling it out with time when we dropped by her studio a few hours before the show to find out what she was whipping up for Atlanta's Spring fashion fare.

Above the whistle of the wind outside and the steady, never-ceasing whirr of sewing machines within, blended with the swish of taffeta, the soft, gentle purr of silks, the contented whisper of sheer wools, the slow murmur of satins, Mrs. Swafford stood, poised in the center of her drawing room, a tiny figure, surrounded by mounds of heavenly hued fabrics, like droppings from the rainbow.

In a light, clear voice, she mentioned something about "pure silk marquisette" as she lifted a shrimp pink cloud cuddled in the curve of a chair arm, shook it gently out and lo! there was a shrimp pink silk marquisette wrapped redingote to be worn over a strapless gold sheath, a combination designed to arrange clumps of bright artificial flowers, whose one coral colored bunch and held it up to the waistline of a turquoise blue taffeta skirt with a black sheath-like blouse, turning it quickly into a delectable cocktail costume. Then quickly combined the blouse with a taupe and brown-striped coat and a solid brown wool skirt for a stunning street ensemble. The hat she has designed for the latter is a small taupe felt bonnet covered in coarse fish-net veiling, studded with jet beads.

"I love linen for practically all occasions," she remarked fondly, and simultaneously a model appeared in the doorway wearing a shell pink linen duster, with fitted back and straight mandarin front, lined with matching pink taffeta. Against one door hung a soft green linen dress, its straight lines interrupted just below the hips by double pockets with heavy cording, repeated around the straight Chinese collar and tiny short sleeves. Forging deeper into the workroom, there were other linens, pale beige, yellows, corals, reds, blues, in dresses, coats, suits and short dinner frocks.

"Georgette," the words were barely louder than a thought, "soft and silky, especially in pale tones over darker ones." The example hung like a pale beige wisp of smoke over a black taffeta strapless sheath. There were other things, spilling in all directions, a tomato red cape suit of light weight wool with a lime green blouse and lining to the cape-coat, a soft gray, black and porcelain blue printed pussy willow silk dress with detachable peplum lined in gray taffeta and a crisp black shantung dress with large white pique collar and cuffs. Pale pink chambray Summer afternoon dress with hand-embroidered collar and cuffs and navy linen knee-length walking shorts with white linen middle blouse trimmed in red braid and an evening dress with sheer silver mesh top, full lilac colored marquisette skirt over lilac and silver changeable taffeta.

As we wandered out, a few thoughts had become established in our minds. Atlanta women will be slipping into many sheaths this Spring and Summer, in many fabrics and many colors. Their skirts will be slim and straight or slim and gently pleated by day and frankly full by night. They'll have two changes in most of their dresses, either through separate jackets over straight dresses or sheer redingotes over strapless sheaths.

And if Thelma Swafford has her way about it, they'll all look pretty.

MILDRED SEYDELL SAYS:

New Granddaughter
Has American Names

It could not happen in Belgium. That beautiful little baby a week old could not have been named Mildred Woolley Seydell, for her paternal grandmother! Because neither the name Mildred nor Woolley appears on the list of saints. And in Belgium the birth certificate must bear a listed government name of some person who had achieved sainthood.

The adorable little lady, the daughter of Jane and John Seydell, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds and the late Paul Seydell and Mrs. Max Seydell, is an American and it won't matter to her that she won't have two special days in the year for receiving gifts—her birthday and her saint's day—as Belgian children have. The birth of Mildred, Jr.'s eldest sister, Elizabeth, started the Grandmother's Club in Georgia.

I was a columnist on the Georgian at the time. I rushed in to tell the news to the late Dudley Glass, then a co-worker. "Shoo!" warned Dudley, looking furtively about, regarding me pityingly as if I had confessed a heinous crime.

"Don't tell a soul, keep it quiet," said he. "You are laid on the shelf, will lose your job, can't get married, if they think you are old enough to be a grandparent. The world has no use for the aging."

"But I am happy in my new role and happiness makes you feel younger!"

Fortunately, I read that night in the Chicago newspaper the account of the Folies put on by the Grandmother's Club. "That's the Club for me," I reckoned. They are proving you can be gay and active and in the news through a grandmother.

Shortly afterwards, as a vice president of the National organization, with the help of the Roy Emmets, I formed a Grandmother's Club in Cedartown. Its success established grandmothers in high consideration. Now under the able leadership of Mrs. Long there is an Atlanta Club with 75 members. Today, if you are a grandparent, you don't have to whisper it, you can go about bragging!

The other night at dinner at the Driving Club with the Phil McDuffies, the Alex Smiths, the Clarence Havertys, the chatter was of travel. The McDuffies and Smiths are headed for Belgium, and the Havertys were there last Summer.

"Don't miss the FLORALIES!" I advised.

"What's that?"

It is the world-famous flower exposition—takes place only every five years in Ghent, Belgium, about 40 miles from Brussels. It started in February, 1809. Wars alone have prevented it. In its Visitors' Book are names of royalty of the last century. Victoria, of England, and her Prince Consort, Albert, were most enthusiastic about it. It is international flower exhibits from everywhere—big startling surprises. You'll see "Flora," the Roman's goddess of flowers, in Olympus. They say the orchid exhibit will astound even the blasé.

You can hire a car in Brussels for the hour's ride to Ghent, passing fields of azaleas and hydrangeas, specialties of that part of the world. Or there is a good train schedule. Date: April 22 to May 1.

"Speaking of orchids," said my dinner partner, "before you know it one of our little grandsons will be sending Mildred Woolley Seydell, Jr., an orchid to wear here to the club for a dance." At that, Philip McDuffie jotted down on a paper for Mildred's baby book the names of the grandsons born in 1947 or thereafter, of those present. Here they are: Edward Gay, III, David Wallace Maddox, Ted Smith Clark, Rodrick Hill.

Later at the club Mrs. McClain added to the list her grandson, Philip Donehue, III, and ending the list is the grandson of the Moises, John Edward Dierwirth, II.

As you see, there is no lack of beaux for the belles of tomorrow!

DAR To Hear

Muggsy Smith

Mrs. Peterson's husband is the Representative of Montgomery County.

The meeting will take place at the home of Mrs. Martin Myers at 2938 Howell Mill Rd., N. W., with Miss Sarah Hoshaw, Mrs. Dixon Fowler and Mrs. John W. Huey as cohostesses.

Mrs. T. L. Hoshaw, Jr., Chairman of Americanism for the chapter, is directing the program and Mrs. Walter Sheffield, Chairman for the program, will present Mr. Smith.

Is Evie Robert Prospect For Nation's No. 1 Hostess?

By SALLY FORTH

As soon as Mrs. Perle Mesta took over her duties as Minister Mesta of Luxembourg, society editors in the National Capital began to name Mrs. Lawrence W. Robert, the inimitable Evie, as her successor in the role of Washington's No. 1 hostess.

Perhaps it was wishful thinking, for just last week Evelyn Peyton Gordon of the Daily News, opined that Evie wouldn't stay in town long enough to justify the coveted title. She wouldn't work at it. And how right she is. At the moment the Roberts are in Nassau, following a visit in Palm Beach and another in Miami. They have covered that much ground since the 15th, and doubtless Evie already has trip plans cooking for Spring and Summer. Certainly no grass grows under her feet.

Even if she won't stay put, however, Evie does all right by Washington society reporters—she entertains enough to keep their columns from getting dull. And as everyone knows, she has never given a dull party.

For example, there was the Valentine party she and "Chip" gave for their close friends, Vice President Barkley and his bride, on the evening before they left for Southern climes.

The affair—a dinner for 52 covers—was held at the 1925 F Street Club, which Evie decorated with masses of red and white carnations and maiden-hair fern on the tables, and huge red cupids and hearts on the draperies. To complete her motif, she wore a deep red brocade gown.

First on the program, according to Mrs. Gordon, was Birney Robert, whom she described as "the enchanting, dark-haired daughter of the Roberts." Birney, it seems, had never met the Barkleys, and as her mother explained, "There's something about the appearance of a child, even for a moment, that makes a party informal." So Birney was there in a dark blue velvet jumper with a white silk blouse, and was obviously excited as she curtsied to the Vee and his bride.

The guest list was interesting because it included Jackson Dick, of Atlanta, and those former Atlantans, World Bank Chief Eugene Black, whom columnist Gordon described as "looking too young for such a burden," and "his even younger wife."

It was also impressive, because there were such bigwigs as General and Mrs. Omar Bradley, Speaker Sam Rayburn, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Snyder, Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Johnson, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and Mrs. Vardaman, Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Symington and Mrs. Symington, the Steve Earlys, the Les Biffles, and National Democratic Chairman Bill Boyle.

It is Austine, of the Washington Times-Herald, to whom we are indebted for this little story of the Vice President's Valentine to his bride.

He sent Mrs. Barkley a telegram, it seems, which read: "Will you be my Valentine? If yes, congratulations."

When he returned that evening, he found on his pillow a telegram addressed to the Vice President which said succinctly: "I accept your congratulations."

Austine is also responsible for the information that the Vice

'Keep Georgia Green Week' Proclaimed by Talmadge

Gov. Talmadge has proclaimed the week of February 19-25 as "Keep Georgia Green Week."

This marks the second anniversary of the "Keep Georgia Green" program, which emphasizes the protection and development of Georgia's greatest natural resource.

Since its inception the "Keep Georgia Green" program has become a mighty movement which serves to impress upon all the people of Georgia the fact that her forests provide the raw materials for a $300,000,000 business every year and furnish a livelihood for more than 120,000 Georgians.

The "Keep Georgia Green" program is sponsored by the Georgia Forestry Association, Inc., as one of the Association's projects directed toward better protection, management and development of Georgia's woodlands.

The observance of the week this year finds more Georgia forest land under organized fire protection than ever before. Expansion of the protection activities of the Georgia Forestry Commission during the last six months has increased the total of protected woodland in the State to 13,500,000. This represents an increase in protected lands of more than 5,000,000 acres during the past six months.

The program re-emphasizes the necessity of complete co-operation and support of all the people in forest fire protection and proper forest management. Especially is this public co-operation and support of great importance this year as many areas in Georgia are currently experiencing the worst forest fire season in several years. Extended dry periods and continuing high winds in many areas have resulted in critical fire damage conditions.

McCants' Award Applications Asked

Applications are being accepted for the McCants' Memorial Scholarship award for 1950, according to an announcement from the State Department of Education.

The award, amounting to $200, is given each year to a Georgian who shows promise of making a contribution to library development in the State. The award is to be used to assist the person chosen in acquiring library training.

The 1950 committee making the award consists of Miss O. M. Wyeth, Librarian, Savannah Public Library; Mrs. Kathleen Broadhurst, Instructor of Library Service, University of Georgia, and Miss Grace Highwater, Library Assistant to the State Department of Education. Applications may be sent to any member of the committee.

President claims he started the marriage ball rolling, that it knocked down such stalwarts as Clark Gable, Mayor O'Dwyer, and Cary Grant, and that there is still another prominent man to bite the dust... namely, the bishop who married the Barkleys. She further revealed that the bishop was coming to Washington in a few months and that the Barkleys would give a party to announce his engagement.

What she did not reveal, however, was that the bishop's fiancée is an engaging young widow from Winder, Ga.

County Forest Protection Units of the Georgia Forestry Commission as well as fire protection forces of private industries have for weeks been working under great pressure in some parts of the State in the fight to suppress wild woods fires and hold down the fire loss.

Now--Enjoy the Thrill of Better Hearing With a New 1950 Beltone

Kint HearingAid Service Ready To Supply You

Close to 200 Beltone distributors participated in their first international convention held recently at the LaSalle Hotel in Chicago. Representatives of the local organization taking part in the meetings were Mr. and Mrs. George C. Kint, of Kint Hearing Aid Service in the Mortgage Guarantee Building.

Delegates to Chicago from every corner of the United States, Canada, Europe, South America and Australia, helped plan Beltone's 1950 program to give still more scientific help to the "hard of hearing."

The new Beltone Melody model was unveiled at the convention for the first time. Small in size, clear in reception, the "Melody" is powered by a tiny "atom" A battery which is smaller than a dime in diameter, and less than half an inch high. Another special feature is its beautiful stainless alloy case, which gives maximum protection and makes the hearing aid light in weight.

ADMIRING NEW 1950 BELTONE—Here are two ladies much interested in the new 1950 Beltone. They are, left, Miss Martha MacLauchlan, consultant for the Kint Hearing Aid Service, in the Mortgage Guarantee Building, and Mrs. George Kint, wife of the manager, in whose name the concern is known, and a valuable acquisition to the service. This latest model, small in size, clear in reception, is a tribute to Beltone's stride in producing hearing-aid instruments.

is a tribute to Beltone's tremendous strides in producing a hearing aid that the "hard-of-hearing" person can wear comfortably, without embarrassment, and with remarkable hearing assistance.

A number of distributors present, suffering extremely severe hearing losses, said they were able to hear better with the Melody than with any other instrument they had ever tried.

Here are some of the new advantages you get in wearing a new 1950 Beltone:

New! High in fidelity—clear tone. These wonderful new benefits will be a revelation to you when you try the new 1950 Beltone. New advantages for greater hearing pleasure, for better understanding, may now be yours—thanks to new electronic discoveries.

New! Super power—noise suppressor. Though tinier than ever, the new 1950 model gives even more power than the previous larger Beltone model. New "noise suppressor" makes conversations easier to understand—by cutting out unwanted background noises!

New! Super comfort, super ease. So easy to wear. The newest model is 26 percent smaller, 16 percent lighter. Actually weighs only 5 1/10 ounces.

No button need show in your ear—thanks to an utterly transparent, almost invisible device. And you may now hear again more clearly—understand more easily—than you ever dreamed possible.

The progress of the Beltone Company in growth and development of their product, is outstanding example of how free enterprise can prosper in free America. This company grew in just ten years from a tiny firm employing just three people, to become undisputed leader in the hearing aid industry, employing hundreds of men and women in its Chicago factory, and thousands of distributors, consultants, etc., throughout the world.

The Beltone Company, through its advertising agency, Rutledge & Ryan, Inc., is spending more than a million and a quarter dollars a year on advertising, with newspapers carrying the greatest burden of the campaign.

Teen-Age Skating Class Started at Rollerdrome

Including Skating Instructions And Skates; 17 Cents Each Tues.

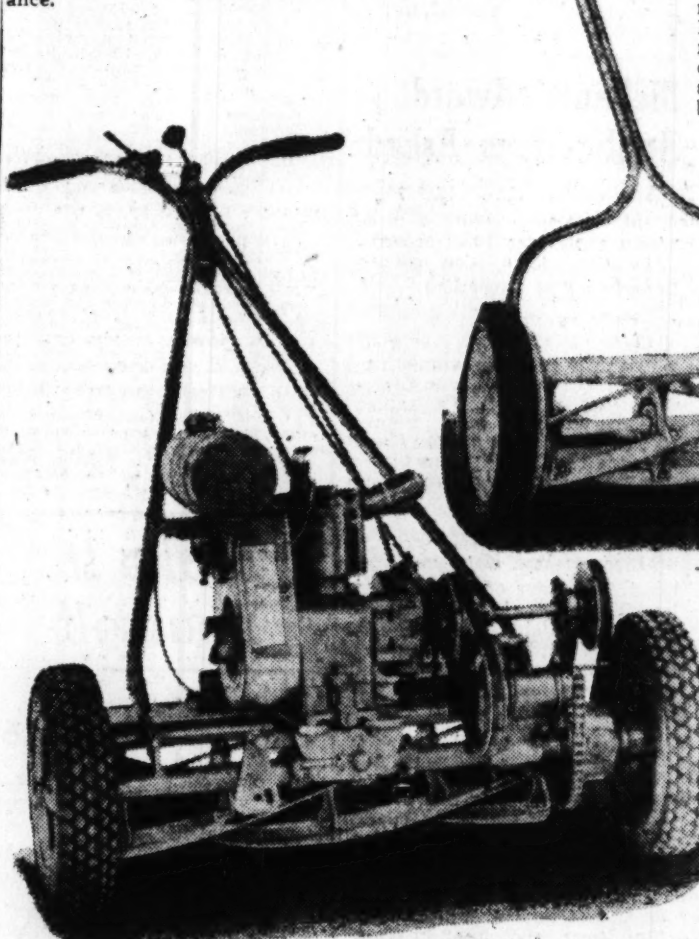

In co-operation with the Greater Atlanta High School System, the Rollerdrome skating rink is providing well-ordered and healthful recreation for all high school age youngsters, and at a price that everyone can afford.

Every Tuesday afternoon, from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m., Mr. Kahn, the genial rink operator, opens his doors for the nominal fee of 17 cents per person (tax included). This price provides you with the use of rink skates and a 15-minute skating class taught by Mrs. Richard Lynch, coach of the well-known Atlanta Figure Skating Club, which won three trophies in competition last year. "Anyone can make a good skater, it just takes 'know-how' and a little effort," Mrs. Lynch says. The "know-how" is provided by the classes at the rink. For any additional information about the classes, call AT. 3218.

If you are a high school student in the Atlanta area, Mr. Kahn asks you to consider this as your personal invitation to visit the Rollerdrome for the weekly teen-age skating session each Tuesday. Parents are most welcome and there is no spectator fee at the Tuesday matinee.

The Rollerdrome is located at Penn and Ponce de Leon Avenues.

Below shows a heavy-duty Toro power mower for larger homes, schools, cemeteries and commercial users. They're engineered from top to bottom for extra strength and dependable performance.

These two polled the most votes in the popularity contest sponsored by the Amateur Skating Club at the rink. The proceeds of the contest (1c per vote) will help pay the expenses of any skaters who may qualify in the Southern Regional Championships to be held at the Rollerdrome in April to go to Denver and participate in the National Roller Skating Dance and Figure Skating Championships.

At left shows the Toro Sportsman, a quiet, easy-to-push mower. It sets a new standard of lawn mower design and efficiency. Its construction includes tempered steel in the knife and cutting blades.

Gives Clean Wash Like You Always Wanted

By JIMMY CHAMBERS

Heretofore, you have had to solve your washday problems with the best means at your disposal. Of course, you were not always satisfied with the methods used or the results obtained, but you had to accept them, since there were no better methods available.

But now, Morgan's, a Decatur laundry for over 20 years, has installed an entirely new type super self-service laundry. During their 22 years operating a laundry, they have gained valuable knowledge, which, added to their scientific studies, has been combined into their completely new self-service laundry.

They have made a careful study of all the needs of a self-service laundry and they now have in their modern plant the newest and finest equipment available.

They have a number of large stainless steel washers, which hold up to 25 pounds of clothing; three stainless steel extractors and four huge warm-air drying tumblers. The washers are designed differently from any equipment used by any other self-service laundry in the State. It is a laundry plant that has been designed with your wash-day problems in mind; therefore, the solution to all those problems is now at hand.

When you bring your clothes in to have them washed, you do not have to wait to put them into the machine. You do not have to wait and add the soap and other solutions necessary to give you a good, clean wash. Morgan's trained attendant handles all this. In other words, you bring your dirty clothes in and leave them. You can go shopping, read or listen to the music provided for your enjoyment by Morgan's.

When the clothes are first brought in, they are separated into various classifications to insure a better washing. Morgan's trained attendant classifies your clothes into three major groups. They are: colors that will fade, ladies' silks and fancy pieces, and all white and fast colors that will withstand bleaching.

After these classifications, the clothes are washed as follows: The first operation is a five-minute sudsing, consuming 20 gallons of water and soap at the proper temperature. This solution is then drained out of the machine and a second five-minute sudsing with another 20 gallons of water and soap takes place. The third operation is the same as the first and second. If clothes are to be bleached, that operation is now carried out, which is drained out of the machine as in the previous operations.

Then the rinsing operation begins. This is a continuous operation until 100 gallons of pure, fresh water in thoroughly run through your clothes. This leaves the clothes fresh and free from all soaps and dirt.

Since Morgan's opened this self-service laundry the first of year, their list of patrons has grown steadily. Their customers like the results obtained so well that they return again and again. In fact, many of their patrons say that they

SUPER SELF-SERVICE LAUNDRY—Above shows Morgan's new super self-service laundry at 200 Atlanta Ave., in Decatur. Morgan's, a Decatur laundry for over 20 years, recently opened this type laundry in order to help its many patrons who need faster service at times, but still offer the same high-class work as offered in their laundry. On the left can be seen the new type washers that hold up to 25 pounds of clothes. When the clothes are rinsed, they are emptied into a bucket, as the man in the picture is doing, and sent down the track to the extractors. If you want them completely dry, they are then placed into one of their warm-air dryers. When you pick your clean, fresh clothes up, they will be wrapped and ready to take home.

CHANNING COPE'S ALMANAC:

Forest Fires Demand Wider Public Attention

MONDAY, FEB. 20, 1950

Suggestion of the day:

The March garden map will be out most any day and we can get at the late Winter planting. Elmo Ragsdale, of Extension, does a swell job on these garden maps and they are well worth having, keeping and following.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

OCALA, Fla.—Being in the company of professional foresters it is impossible to get the matter of fire out of your mind or out of the conversation. Fire in the woods is the constant threat in these parts and whereas the average farmer would take it as a matter of course and regret that it is burning, the professional forester knows its awful destroying power and is charged with the job of seeing that it is kept out of the woods, if possible, or that it is put out at the earliest moment if it does catch.

The foresters keep themselves alert to the appearance or smell of smoke. Towers located at strategic intervals and a forester is on watch constantly. He is equipped with communication facilities that reach at once into the dispatcher's office.

The dispatcher in turn alerts all crews located within the area and starts out the various crews with various kinds of equipment. The tower men have range finders which aid them in locating the exact spot where the fire or smoke appears.

Even in recreation hours the foresters are observing the wind, its force and direction, and lamenting the fact that the area is very dry and that the wind is in just the right place to do the most damage. They remind you that one fire some years ago raced along at the devastating rate of 300 acres of timber per minute. This area is only now growing back into pine.

There had been no rain in the Ocala National Forest in more than two months and the strain was becoming intense. It is too much to expect the dry spell to continue and the wind to blow and no fire to start. One feels the drama almost at once on entering the forest.

In Georgia and in areas where we do not take our forestry problems seriously enough we can avail ourselves of the same common-sense program that is going on in the Government forests. We can, if we will, assemble our blocks of timber into

ARMY RED TAPE

Gives Up Bars To Get Wife

COLUMBUS — (AP)—Edgar Lee Nelson has given up his lieutenant's bars for a sergeant's chevrons all because of his Austrian-born wife.

The 30-year-old Columbusite ran into trouble in obtaining a visa for his wife while in Europe. So he returned to the U. S. and tried his hand at unraveling the red tape.

After his discharge as a lieutenant, the Army advised him to reenlist as a noncommissioned officer to help speed his wife across the seas.

protective areas, with co-operation from County, State and Federal Government. We could include also the protection of wildlife and thereby do two very necessary jobs. This would result in profit, beauty and added interest. I think our Yellow River watershed might be a good place to begin.

It would pay the North and Middle Georgia farmer to visit the national forests and get something of the regard that professional men have for the trees, woods and wildlife. And, offhand, I don't know any better places than our own Chattahoochee National Forest in the mountains and the Ocala Forest in Northern Florida.

I will never forget my personal visits to both of them.

Lint Group To Sponsor Cotton Test

ATHENS—For the fourth year in a row, the Georgia Cottonseed Crushers Association is offering $3,500 in prizes to Georgia farmers who make the largest yields of cotton on five acres. E. C. Westbrook, agronomist of the Agricultural Extension Service, revealed today.

Farmers in each of the six Extension Service districts will compete for district prizes in addition to the State award of $500 for the farmer who produces the largest yield in the State. There are three prizes offered in each district: $250, first; $150, second, and $100, third.

The contest is sponsored by the Georgia Cottonseed Crushers Association, and conducted by the Georgia Agricultural Extension Service.

Farmers who desire to enter the Five-Acre Cotton Contest this year should obtain copy of the rules and regulations governing the contest, Westbrook said. The deadline for entering the contest is June 15.

The State winner in 1949, W. A. Meadows, Cochran, produced three bales per acre on five acres. This yield exceeded the top yield in the Five-Acre Cotton Contest in both South Carolina and North Carolina, according to Westbrook, and "this seems to indicate that when farmers make full use of all of the information that is available about growing cotton, attractive yields can be produced."

City in Indiana

To Drain Off Garbage

JASPER, Ind.—(AP)—The garbage collectors' jobs go down the drain Aug. 1 in this city of 6,800. By that time, Jasper expects to become the first city in the country with garbage disposal relegated to the kitchen sink.

The city-sponsored project offers individual sink drain garbage grinders at half-price at $75. Already more than half the homeowners have turned in their orders.

Sun in Pisces
General Tendencies—This is a pleasantly progressive day, people seeming willing to listen to new ideas and to work out details for their future. The human relationship is very strong at this time, this being one of the main factors in co-operative work. It's quite possible that money matters may improve late in the afternoon and that legal papers or insurance may be affected by this influence. I think the evening is a good time for quiet entertainment, too—everything looks sympathetic and agreeable.

If It's Your Birthday—There's no doubt about it, but you have surprising news immediately at hand, either within the present month or toward the first part of April. This is a pretty good year for you to make up your mind not to rush every matter which may be brought to your attention. You need time for many of your decisions; events will change before next Fall and you will be better able to make lasting arrangements after you have learned about these new elements. Love affairs? Well, maybe. No love at first sight if you're wise, however.
